It's important that donations are made to a variety of these campaigns because while all are in the general area of the campsite and do communicate, the different campaigns don't always or can't always share different resources. Grab a group of friends, make strips of paper, and shuffle to make donations.

It has come to my attention that this regained popularity in recent weeks. As the author, I'm deeply humbled by the support in the form of reblogs and likes even despite the crass language. I'm not Lakota or from the areas of these tribes. I'm from a Pueblo in New Mexico (shout-out to the Pueblo camp at standing Rock!) And Navajo Nation. I made this post at s tumultuous time in my life when I had accrued so much capital and privilege in the white man's world. Back when these were working links, I was a community organizer that went into a post traumatic stress disorder episode while this post was getting popular 2 years ago when Standing Rock was still at camp. I ask folks to reblog this out of respect to the many people and messages passed that allows for campaigns like these to exist. I'll never know how much was raised but know that y'all were a part of something huge and important. That two years is not a long time and progress is like watching grass grow.

So a lot of people think cut/fresh flowers are really expensive or decadent, and that it's not worth buying them when they're at a reduced price because they'll die within about a day and it's still Too Expensive and like I just. I need to let you know that it isn't true and unless it's a super special occasion and you're going to an actual florist for an actual special bouquet you don't have to, nay shouldn't, pay full price for flowers ever.

I mean I can only really speak for the UK where you can get flowers in the grocery store which is naturally cheaper than a florist, and also where I always get mine, but the techniques apply to "anywhere one can obtain a bunch of flowers"

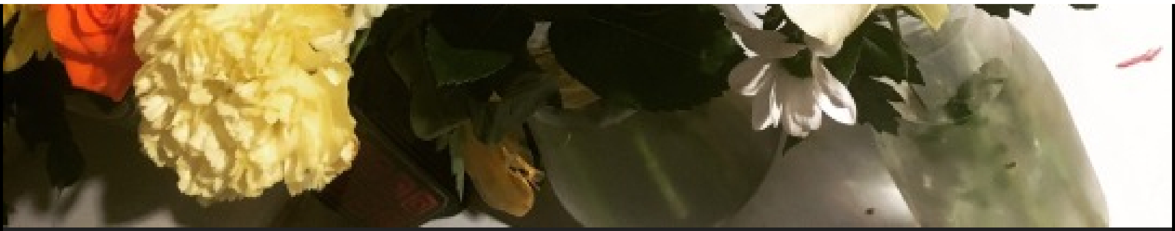
If you take care of your cut flowers - which don't worry isn't hard - the slightly sad looking slightly wilty half price ones will STILL last you two weeks.

Observe:

Everything in that vase except the dark red flowers and the ivory roses was purchased, half wilted, in the reduced bucket an ENTIRE WEEK ago. The dark reds and ivories? TWO WEEKS (I don't normally premade bouquets because they end up in the reduced less often and even when they do they're still more expensive than getting a few bunches of different types of flowers)

TWO. WEEKS. From a wilted half price "we are become death" state.

Here's what it looked like a whole entire week ago when I put the new flowers in:



(the big yellow bastard in the bottom left is also from the previous week)

I mean they've still "hardly wilted" now and if I was so inclined I could leave it another couple of days, but this is normally the point at which I remove them and put new flowers in the gaps. Also, cut off the heads and keep them for a bath. You'll feel So Fucking Fancy and it cost you nothing.

So how do you revive sad looking cut flowers, cheat the system, and have a permanent display of vibrant colourful BUT ULTIMATELY CHEAP AS SHIT flowers in your home?

1. Remove the leaves. You can remove all of them if you like but the most important thing is removing leaves along the length of the stem which will be in water. If leaves are submerged they will begin to rot and just kill everything. You can keep the ones that poke out above the vase for bulk and Oooh Pretty Green if you want, or not.

2. Trim the stems with SHARP and CLEAN (preferably steralised by dunking in some boiling water) scissors or a SHARP and CLEAN knife. Do so at an angle. Chances are you need to shorten the stems so they fit in your vase properly anyway, but doing this allows for better uptake of water and nutrients.

3. Use a CLEAN container. If there's a bit of grossness hanging around from previous flowers, scrub that shit out.

4. Give them cool water. I live in an area with very soft water so I don't have to do anything, but if you don't then either filtering it or letting it stand for a few hours first will help.

5. Use flower feed! Most bunches, at least over here, come with a wee sachet of flower food. If you DON'T get a sachet of feed you can MAKE YOUR OWN. It’s super easy. You need 2 tablespoons of lemon juice, 1 tablespoon of regular white sugar and half a teaspoon of bleach (yes really) per 1 litre (quart) of water. You won’t need a whole litre, obviously, but you can keep it in the cupboard in a bottle or just scale down the recipe. Put a teaspoon (or two if you have a big pitcher style vase) in your water. Different flower types optimally need different levels of sugar and you can totally look up what that ratio is if you only have one kind (like all roses or something) but 1 tablespoon: 1 litre works well enough.

Now that your flowers are back to life, you can keep them looking good for a decent long while

1. Remove dead/wilted heads either as and when you see them or just like once a week (I’m lazy, I just do it once a week)

2. Remove any leaves that are going the same way

3. Once a week, change out the water. Fish out any plant material that may have fallen in, rinse the container, put in new water and feed.

4. When you’re doing the water change, give the stems another small trim. Only 1cm (half an inch) or so, unless the bottom of the stem is going pale and a bit limp looking, in which case lop off as much of that part as you can whilst still being able to fit them in the vase properly. If they end up noticably shorter than the others, just keep those ones to the outside of the arrangement OR put them in the middle and use the other flowers to keep them propped up within the water so they appear the same height.

5. Replace removed dead flowers with ones from your next cut-price bunch. That way you’re a) keeping a perpetual but ever-changing bouquet and b) need to buy less flowers at once than just waiting for everything to die off and replacing the whole thing.

Cut flowers make me happy. I’m sure having a nice beautiful bunch of colourful flowers in your room makes you happy too, and you absolutely don't need to spend a fortune to make that happen.

there overnight just to perk them up. (Also, do your harvesting in the morning, if possible, for your own bouquets.)

Display them on a surface away from direct sunlight. Don’t let them get too hot.

And consider drying flowers! Look it up or just experiment, some dry beautifully, and then you can have some out-of-season color without needing to rely on flown-in blooms.

Oh yes good shout on the fridge! I forget that one because I myself have a tiny wee under-the-counter fridge, and have for years, so I can’t do that with mine and just don’t think about it anymore.

Also thanks for reminding me that it’s wildflower season now. I might go down to the river this week and grab some stuff.

I lost 75 pounds so doctors would stop blaming everything on my weight.

I am 5'6, I was 210 lbs before and am now 135. It took me a year to lose it all, but what finally pushed me to lose the weight was because every single thing I went to a doctor for, it got blamed on my weight. Severe cramps? Weight. Feeling sleepy during the day? Weight. Numbness in my fingers, headaches, memory problems, balance problems? Weight.

I recently went back to my doctors, who of course applauded the weight loss and wrongly assumed all of my problems were gone. When I said no they hadn't, they immediately ordered an MRI, sleep study and lapro, which they hadn't done before the weight loss. The MRI found chiari malformation, the sleep study/physical found out I chiari malformation, the sleep study/physical found out I have an oversized uvula as well as Narcolepsy, and the lapro found so much endo I lost both of my ovaries and a portion of my colon and lower intestines. If it had been taken seriously a year ago, I might not have lost them.

So yea, fuck doctors. (Obviously not all of them)

I think like, while Lil Nas X is tearing apart a lot of troll responses he's getting on twitter for laughs on purpose, I also definitely think we should be careful about how we frame that, how we repost that, and whether that's the thing we focus on here, because the sheer volume and maliciousness of the harassment (from the likes of Fox News and establishments such as that) he's receiving isn't without emotional consequences. he even stated that much:

nope 🏹 ✓ @LilNasX · 29 mar.

i'll be honest all this backlash is putting an emotional toll on me. i try to cover it with humor but it's getting hard. my anxiety is higher than ever and stream call me by your name on all platforms now!

[ID: tweet by Lil Nas X stating: "i'll be honest all this backlash is putting an emotional toll on me. i try to cover it with humour but it's getting hard. my anxiety is higher than ever and stream call me by your name on all platforms now!" /end ID] like we should def appreciate his creativity & his incredible sense of humour in the face of all this, but I think we shouldn't forget the extreme severity of the backlash and hatred in response to a bold and groundbreaking piece of black gay art, that showcases black gay sexuality in a way that is almost never seen, certainly by not such a famous musician, and not erase the fact that the amount of hate he's getting here is both unjust, racially-motivated, and almost definitely tremendously painful and upsetting? or else we risk reducing black performers and artists to mere objects of entertainment and fail to see black performers & artists as people, human beings.

Marie Kondo is full of anecdotes about the weird ass shit that she not only lets people keep but encourages them to elevate in their lives. Marie Kondo would never make you throw away your weird shit! She wants you to pare down to just your weird shit.

She also has organization tips that are basically boiled down to "make everything as easy to access as possible, no stacking things, no tossing things haphazardly into drawers use smaller containers in bigger containers to partition things off (they can be random cardboard packaging etc), you should be able to see everything when you open a drawer or cabinet or what have you, put things where you need them and if that means your shoes are in the kitchen then the shoes belong in the kitchen, if that means granola bars are on the night stand then the granola bars are on the night stand (preferably in their package or in a basket or jar that also sparks joy)"

Coincidentally a lot of these are also tips for people with adhd "everything needs to be visible or it doesn't exist" (i can relate) and other neurodivergent brains (is that the right way to say it???? Genuinely asking, or is it neurodivergents, or neurodivergent ppl or neurodivergencies?) Her whole method is about respecting and caring for what you own and what makes you happy, reframing your perspective towards things you actually need but stress you out (watch her interview with colbert or minhaj to see what I mean), and most importantly respecting and working with the client by giving them a guide and then gently encouraging them to complete her method with very little interference on her part

Final rule makes way for California condors' return to Yurok Country

After a century of absence, condors are returning to Yurok Country.

The Yurok Tribe, National Park Service and the U.S. Department of Fish and Wildlife announced Tuesday a final rule that will help in the creation of a California condor release facility in Yurok ancestral lands and Redwood National Park.

“For the last 20 years, the Yurok Tribe has been actively engaged in the restoration of the rivers, forests and prairies in our ancestral territory. The reintroduction of the condor is one component of this effort to reconstruct the diverse environmental conditions that once existed in our region,” Yurok Chairman Joseph L. James said in a release. “We are extremely proud of the fact that our future generations will not know a world without prey-go-neesh.”

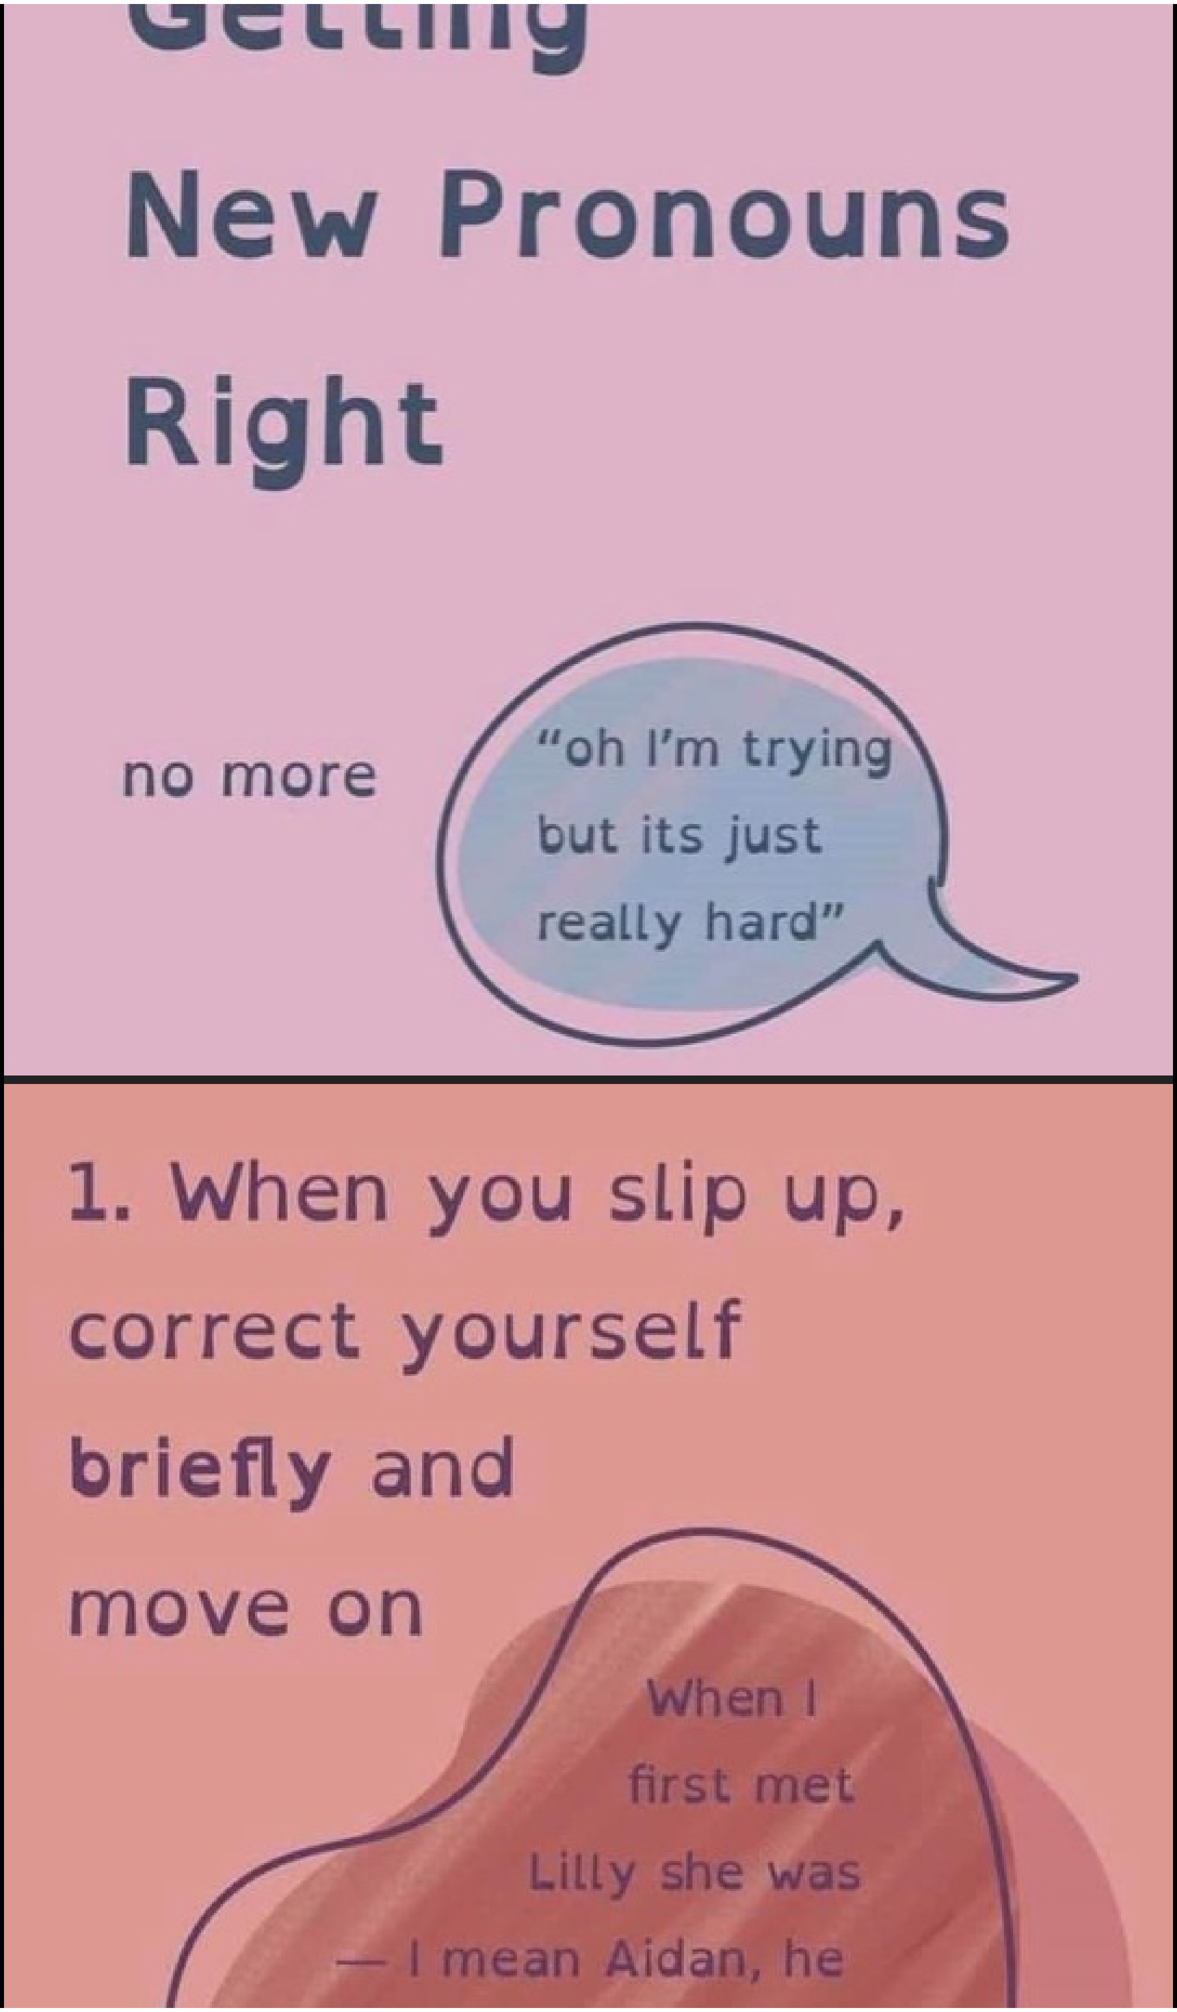
how to do better at

Getting



Getting New Pronouns Right

no more "oh I'm trying but its just really hard"

1. When you slip up, correct yourself briefly and move on

When I first met Lilly she was — I mean Aidan, he was literally doing a handstand on a skateboard.

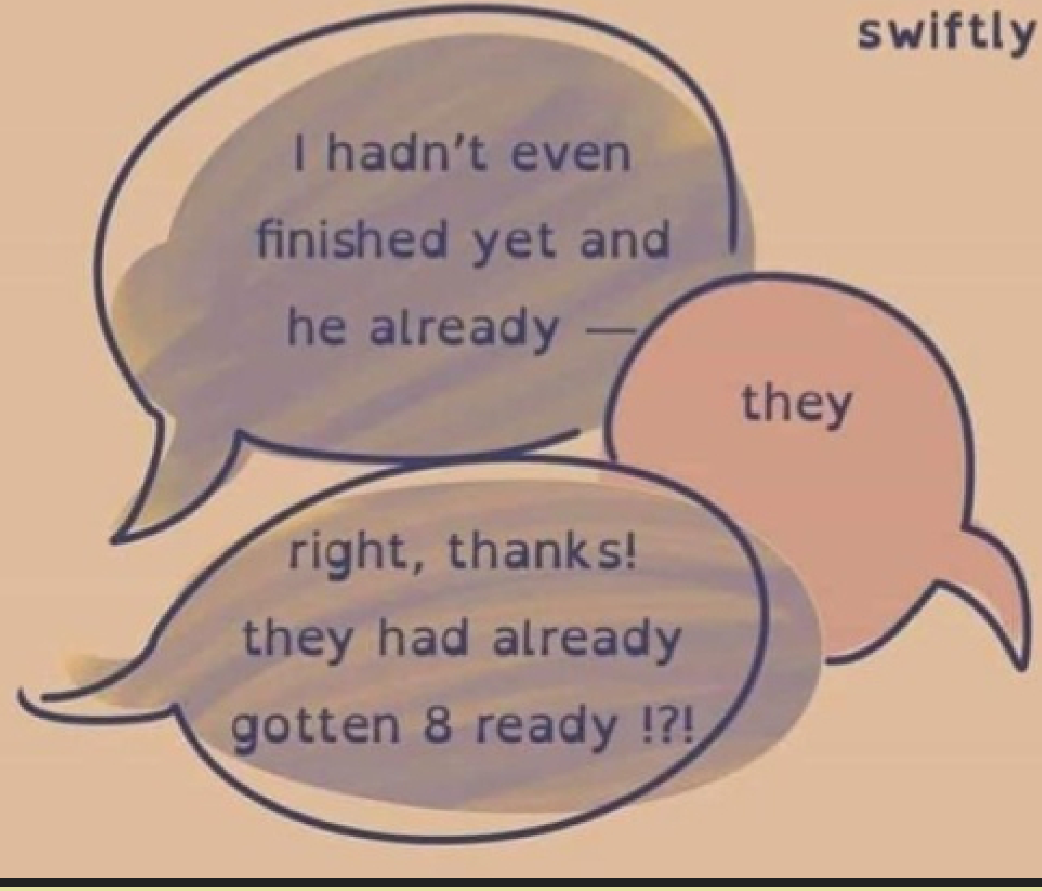
2. When someone corrects you, say "thank you"

and just move on swiftly



I hadn't even finished yet and he already — they right, thanks! they had already gotten 8 ready !?!

3. Get in the habit of interrupting people with a quick correction

yes,
every time

What is she doing? That looks —
He.
Oh yeah. Whatever he's doing looks weird

It sets a good precedent, lifts some burden off trans people,
and makes it easier to catch yourself

4. For every time you get it wrong, do it right 3 times like saying 3 compliments

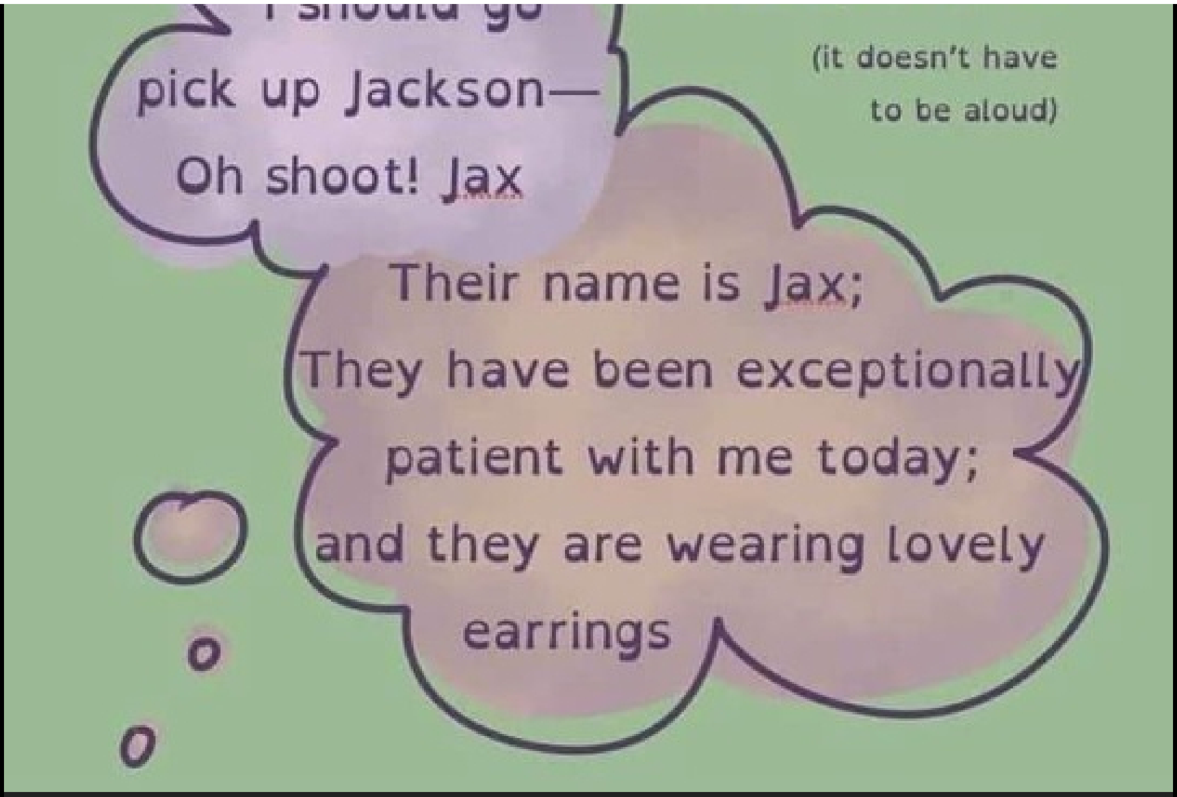
I should go



I should go pick up Jackson— Oh shoot! Jax
(it doesn't have to be aloud)
Their name is Jax; They have been exceptionally patient with me today; and they are wearing lovely earrings

5. Consider meeting with someone to practice

You know, there are some days that really, negative reviews or comments on your work can break you as a writer, really hurt you, then someone decides to go overboard and attack you over and over for the most ridiculous things and magically, it no longer is at risk of hurting your feelings but skips straight to making you laugh at how they are commenting chapter after chapter and trying to pull you down but yet they are still reading and that's fucking hilarious. Why are you still reading if you hate it so much? Why do tell me that you want to report it because you don't feel the triggers are adequate? It went from hurtful to just ridiculous.

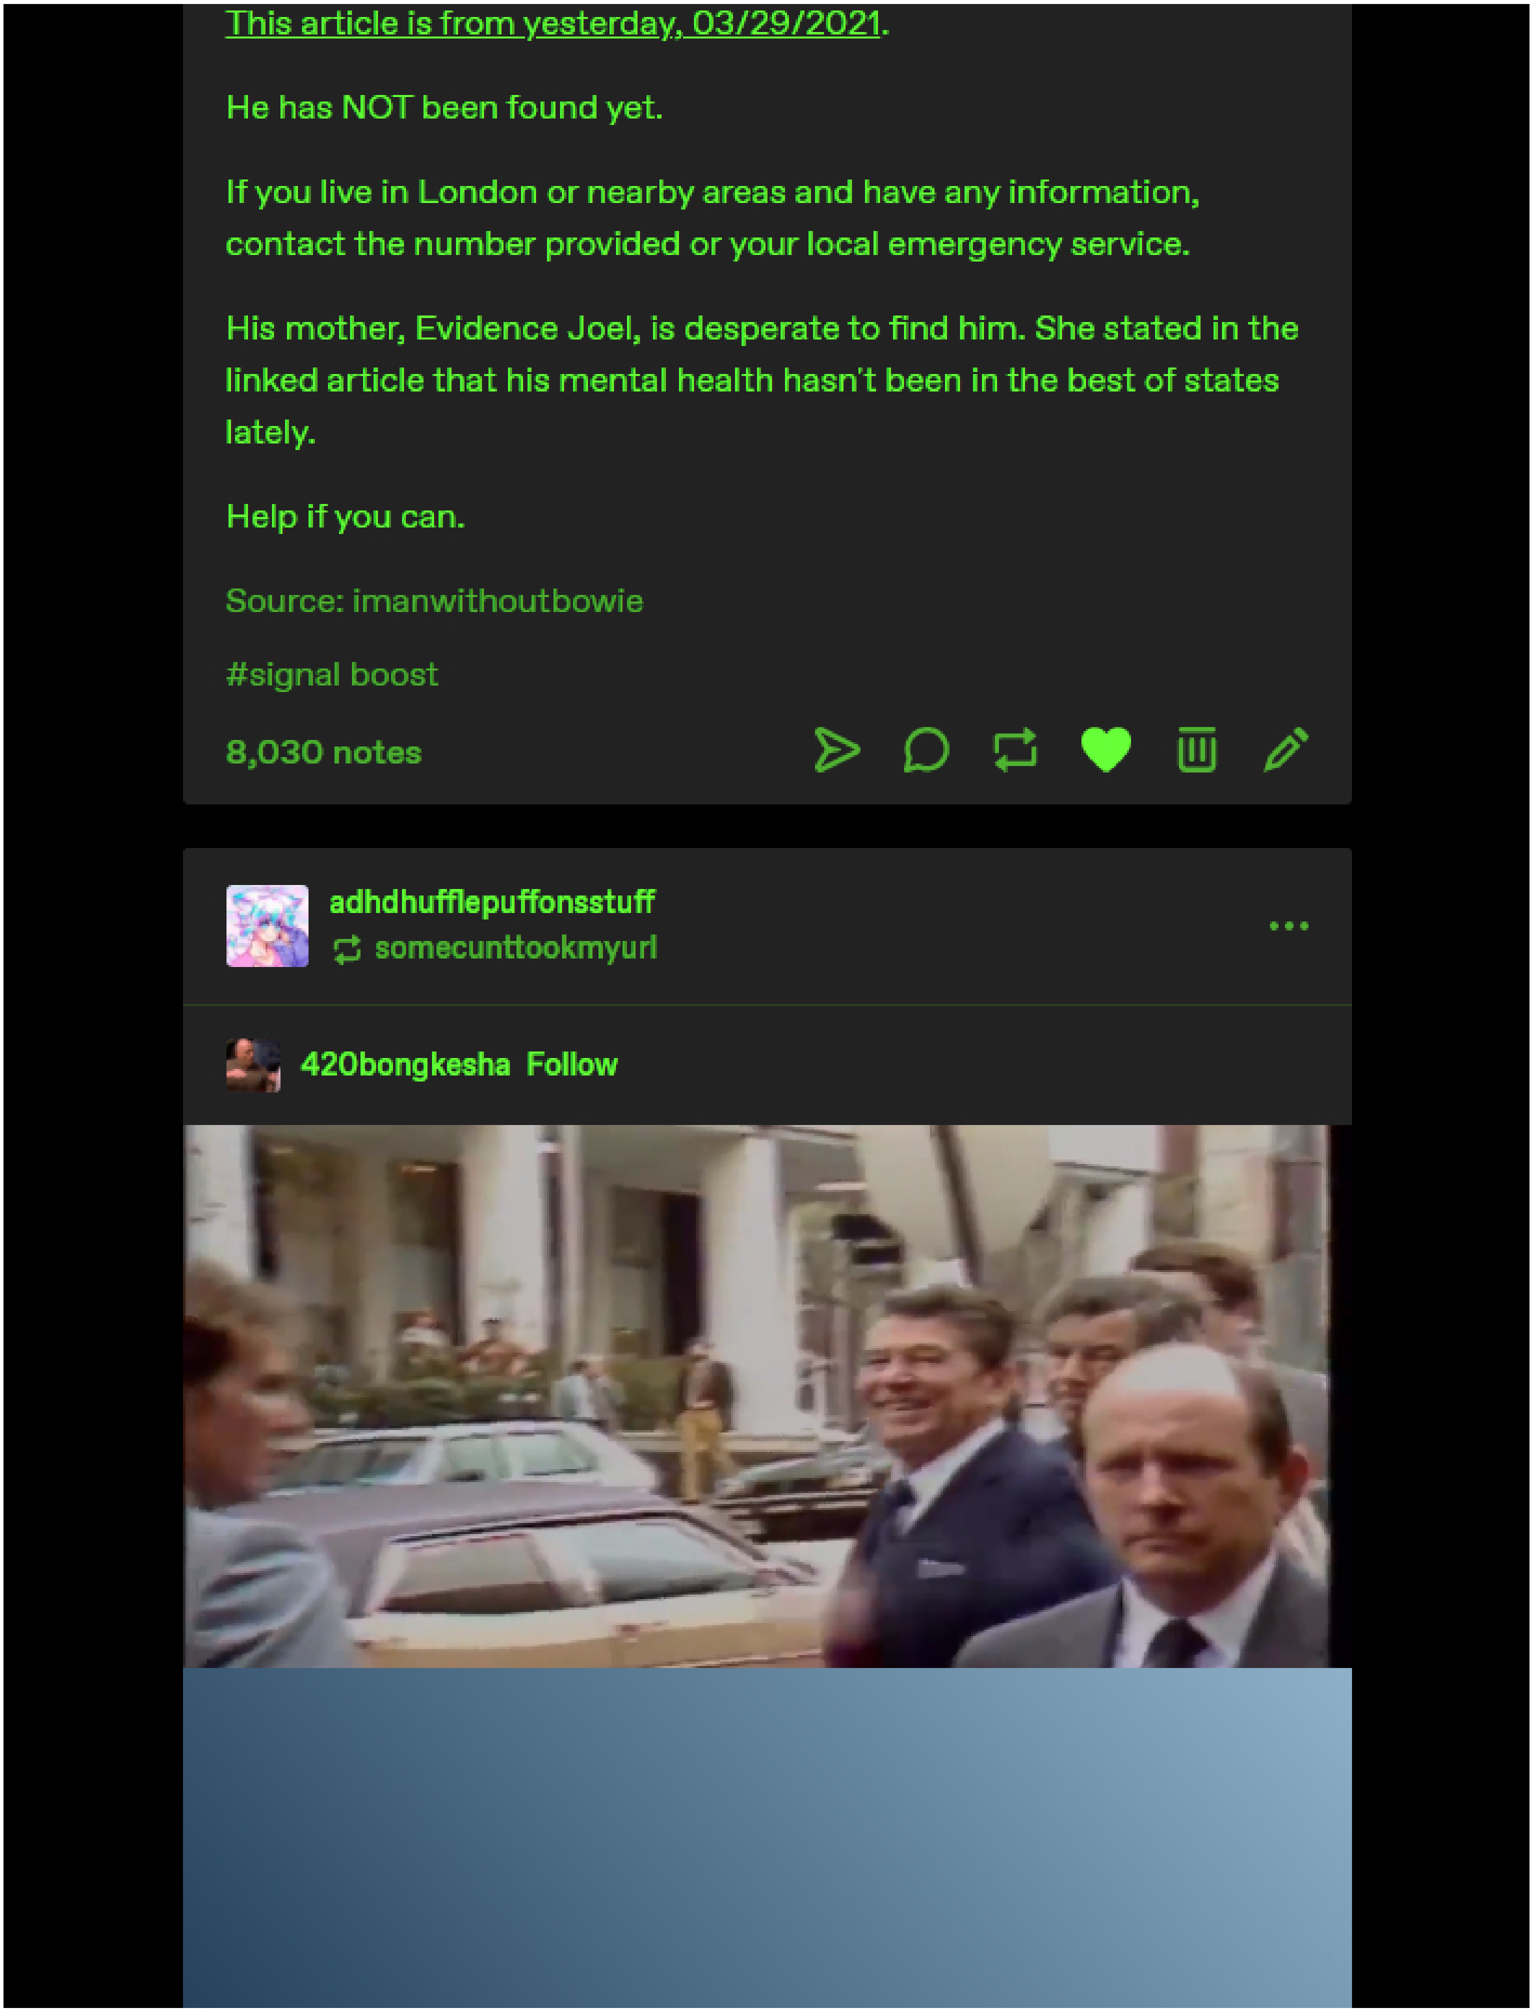
misanharriman 19 year-old Richard Okorogheye has been missing since 8.40pm on Monday 22nd March after telling his mum he was going to visit a friend but none of his friends said they saw him that night. He was last seen walking on Kensal Road in the direction of Ladbroke Grove Sainsbury's wearing a black long sleeve top, black tracksuit bottoms and black trainers. He was also carrying a small Adidas bag and is 6ft tall with a slim build. Richard has been shielding for the past 12 months due to the sickle cell disease he suffers with and would normally only leave the house to go to hospital for regular blood transfusions. His mum is incredibly worried and say the police haven't been helpful. Please share and contact this number if you see him: 07735084081



This article is from yesterday, 03/29/2021.

He has NOT been found yet.

If you live in London or nearby areas and have any information, contact the number provided or your local emergency service.

His mother, Evidence Joel, is desperate to find him. She stated in the linked article that his mental health hasn't been in the best of states lately.

Anime of the day: Ling Qi

Alternate Title: Spiritpact.

Aired: 2016

This is a shounen ai. The anime is about a spirit who becomes bound to a well known exorcist. As a spirit our main character's job is to keep his human alive and assist him in anything he needs. Obviously this is Chinese and it is based on a manhwa. There is some deviation from the original content, but most of the alterations aren't bad. I'm not crazy about the main character's personality, but that's my personal opinion. I found the first season to be a little slow, but the second season really made up for it. The pacing balanced itself out and the plot blossomed nicely. Sometimes things take patience. I'm not always the strongest at patience. I'm always glad to find shounen ai that isn't so romantically focused. This anime is very fantasy focused and the actual boys love parts are more subtle. This also comes from China's restrictions on male relation depiction.

hey so, as a man who works with other men, here's a quick relationship tip: if he doesn't much like cats, that might be just a personal preference. if he hates cats, if he tells you he hates cats as soon as he hears that you have a cat and love your cat, he's an asshole. he's telling on himself.

every guy i've ever worked with that makes a point of telling me how much he hates cats as soon as i mention that i have a cat and love my cat, is always someone who is regularly cruel for fun and who laughs in the breakroom about the mean things they do for fun to their girlfriends and children.

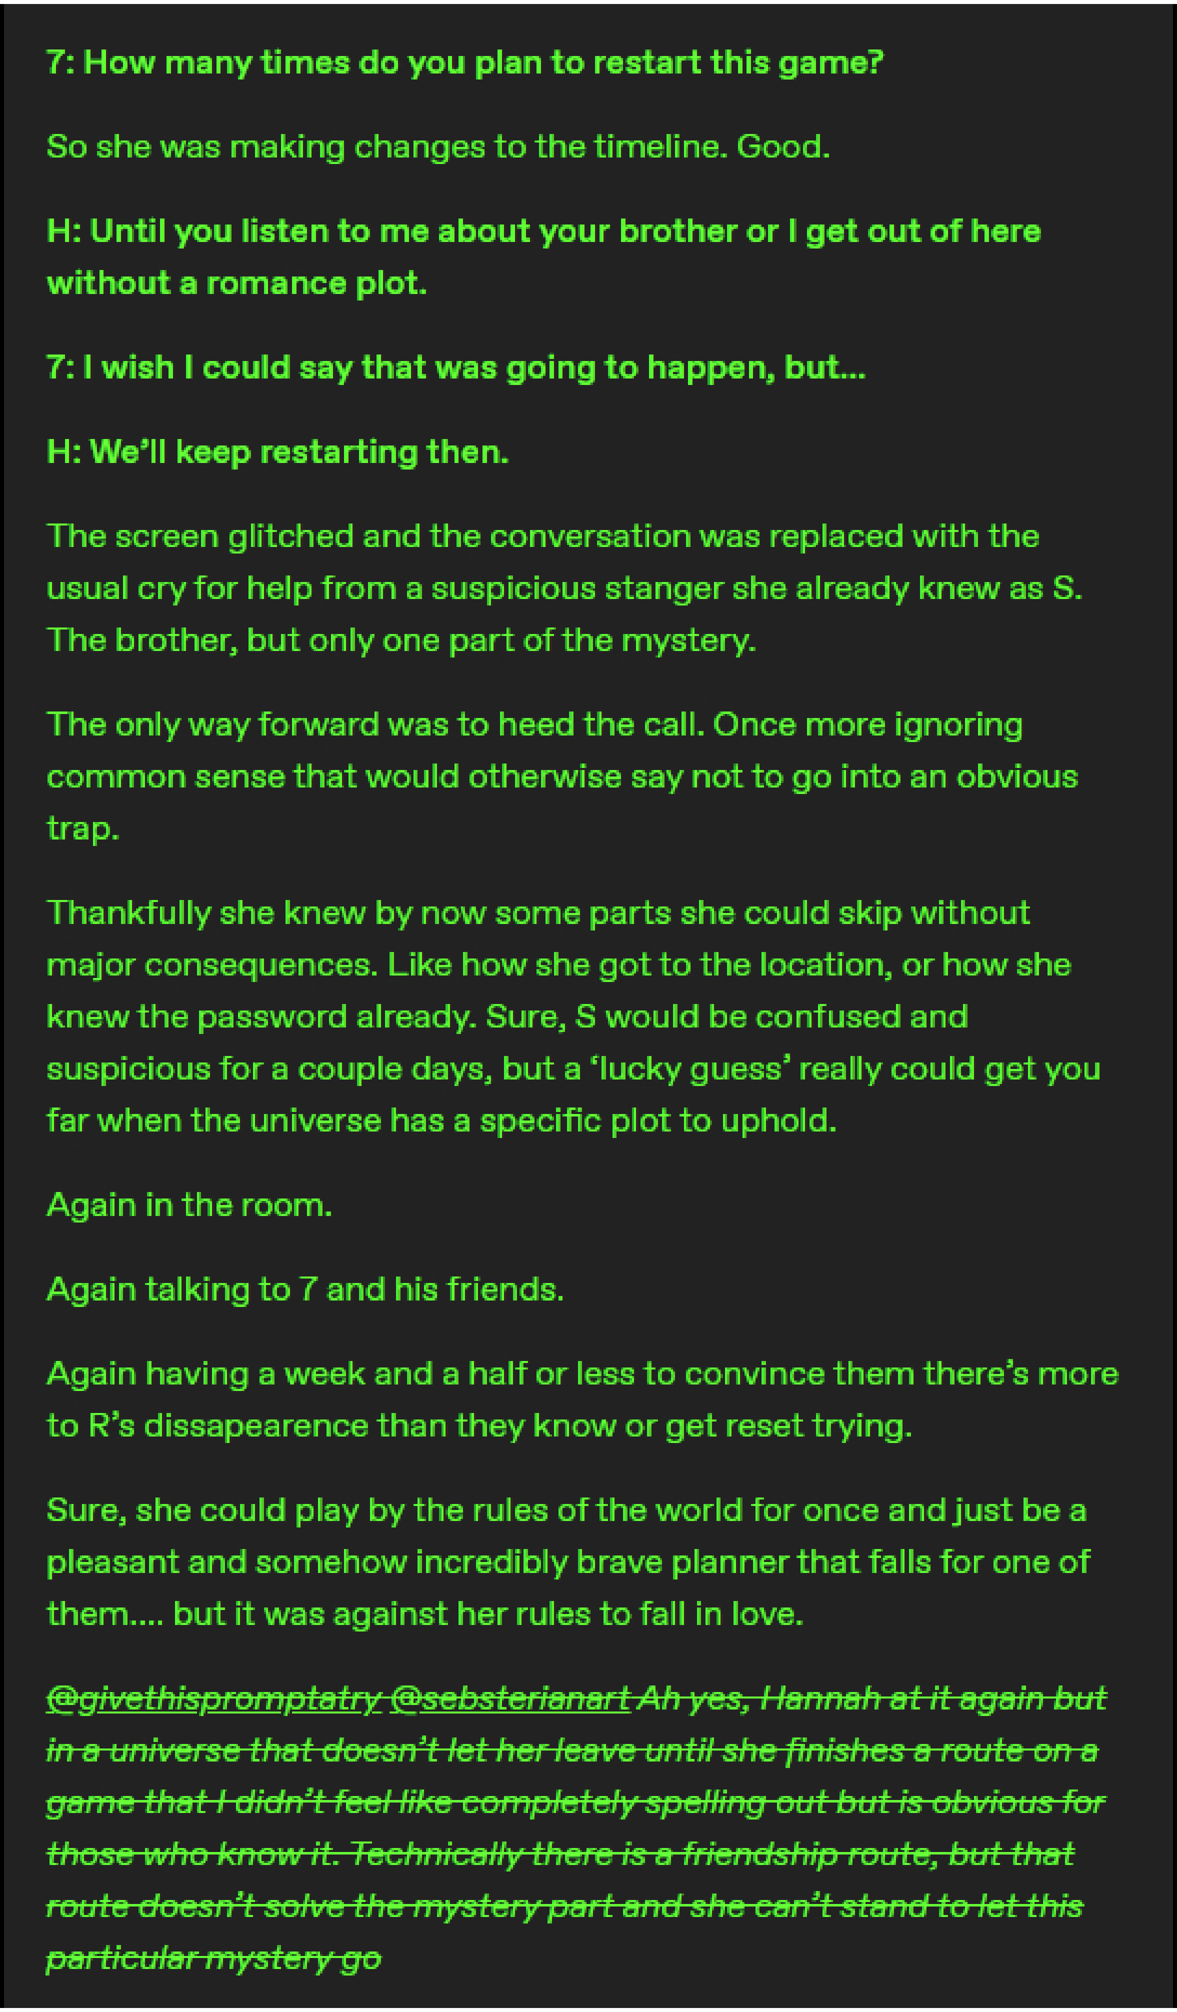
She looked at her phone as a message popped up again. As she opened it she found herself surprised by its sender.



7: How many times do you plan to restart this game?

So she was making changes to the timeline. Good.

H: Until you listen to me about your brother or I get out of here without a romance plot.

7: I wish I could say that was going to happen, but…

H: We'll keep restarting then.

The screen glitched and the conversation was replaced with the usual cry for help from a suspicious stanger she already knew as S. The brother, but only one part of the mystery.

The only way forward was to heed the call. Once more ignoring common sense that would otherwise say not to go into an obvious trap.

Thankfully she knew by now some parts she could skip without major consequences. Like how she got to the location, or how she knew the password already. Sure, S would be confused and suspicious for a couple days, but a 'lucky guess' really could get you far when the universe has a specific plot to uphold.

Again in the room.

Again talking to 7 and his friends.

Again having a week and a half or less to convince them there's more to R's dissapearence than they know or get reset trying.

Sure, she could play by the rules of the world for once and just be a pleasant and somehow incredibly brave planner that falls for one of them…. but it was against her rules to fall in love.

~~@givethispromptatry @sebsterianart Ah yes, Hannah at it again but in a universe that doesn't let her leave until she finishes a route on a game that I didn't feel like completely spelling out but is obvious for those who know it. Technically there is a friendship route, but that route doesn't solve the mystery part and she can't stand to let this particular mystery go~~

You can tell if that's the case by checking the same web page on a different browser if you have a different number of stored cookies for that site. I checked something on Chegg and it was $14.95 on Chrome, $19.95 on Firefox, and $16.95 on Safari.

Amazon is making sockpuppet twitter accounts as an attempt to stop unionizing. Why have corporeal scabs when you can get AI-generated scabs?

these are most likely run by people, not ai. the accounts are still sockpuppets obviously tho

girlfriendluvr

Yeah we're betting that they're either run by PR people or by employees told they'd get a bit extra $$ if they made the accounts and responded to people with prearranged stuff. That being said, the AI comment was because people have been pointing out that a number of these accounts use what appears to be AI-generated people for the pictures, and they could have been used from that linked website.

I know people use phrases like "he's changing the game" and "nobody's doing it like him" a lot for musicians, but I don't think this is an exaggeration at all when talking about Lil Nas X.

When I first saw the music video for Montero (Call Me By Your Name), I just kept thinking about how I had never seen a music video like it, ESPECIALLY from such a well-known artist. I've seen plenty of videos where a man is being sexy, but never in the way that Lil Nas X does it in that video. He sings about riding dick while giving a lap dance. I'm sure there are so many music videos where a male singer does this, but I've never seen them because gay men who express their sexuality in that way are usually prevented from becoming household names.

And he is getting a lot of pushback for it. People are saying that he's trying to indoctrinate children, that he's pushing an agenda, that he's part of the ruination of society. Gay men are seen as sex-crazy predators, and so are androgynous men. For him to make this video expressing himself and his sexuality in the way HE wanted to, knowing how people would take it, especially as a black man, and then attaching his real name to it?

It's trending at #1 on youtube and there's been a huge positive response to it, but he's risking a lot by releasing this video. The whole theme of the video is religious persecution, and we're seeing that exact thing happen to him in real time. He's being called a sinner, he's being told he's going to hell, he's being told that god doesn't love him.

This song and video are resonating with SO MANY people. People who grew up with a religion that teaches that people like them are wrong, with parents who seek to destroy what they do not understand, who have had a closeted partner who only told them they loved them in private, who told themselves that they would never come out to anyone, with people who have struggled with internalized homophobia.

Since the world already has their eyes on Lil Nas X, he's decided to represent himself the way he wants to and tell the stories he wants to tell. From this video to wearing a bright pink leather harness on the red carpet to doing drag on halloween, he is showing everyone that he is not ashamed of who he is and he's willing to put himself and his career at risk to be that person. By doing this, he's showing others that people like him exist and it's ok and it's good.

Lil Nas X is changing the game. His success will open doors for more artists like him. I believe he's going to help change the public perception of what hip-hop can be, and maybe even what a man can be.

theotheristhedoctor Follow

I agree entirely with the above, but I think it's important to remember that Lil Nas X was outed. I think it's rrally important to this conversation that we remember that Lil Nas X released a song that made him popular in a mostly-white section of music, and somebody hated that so much that they outed him to try and derail his career.

When we talk about Lil Nas X, we talk as though this flamboyant gay man is what he set out to show us. But the truth is he was a closeted gay man who wanted to make music, and the same voices that object to him now are the ones who wouldn't let him exist in their spaces when he was trying to be as accomodating to them as possible.

The fact that LNX has embraced their attack on him and turned it into his brand is a mark of his strength and courage, but it does not lessen their malice. And I think any conversation about how he chooses to perform should acknowledge that he was tormented by these people who are now so offended that he won't respect them.

TL;DR: Amazon is of course fully aware that their workers (this article mainly focuses on delivery drivers) are forced to pee in bottles and shit in bags while working, but treats it as an infraction on the part of the worker (!!) that the worker then needs to be disciplined for, as opposed to a reflection on their repulsive practices.

Workers interviewed say that as this issue becomes more prevalent, Amazon has begun to push for higher and higher targets of items-per-hour, further worsening it.

lesbiantruckers Follow

This is nearly standard in the trucking industry. This conversation needs to be bigger! Shippers and recievers often don't let us use their bathrooms, as we are not their employees. There is a shortage of easy to access restrooms on the highways. God forbid you have to pee in the state of Massachusetts. If a cop catches you peeing outside its an indecent exposure charge, and the loss of your job. We have no other options.

Amazon did not invent the mistreatment of truckers. We aren't protected by the same federal labor laws as every one else.

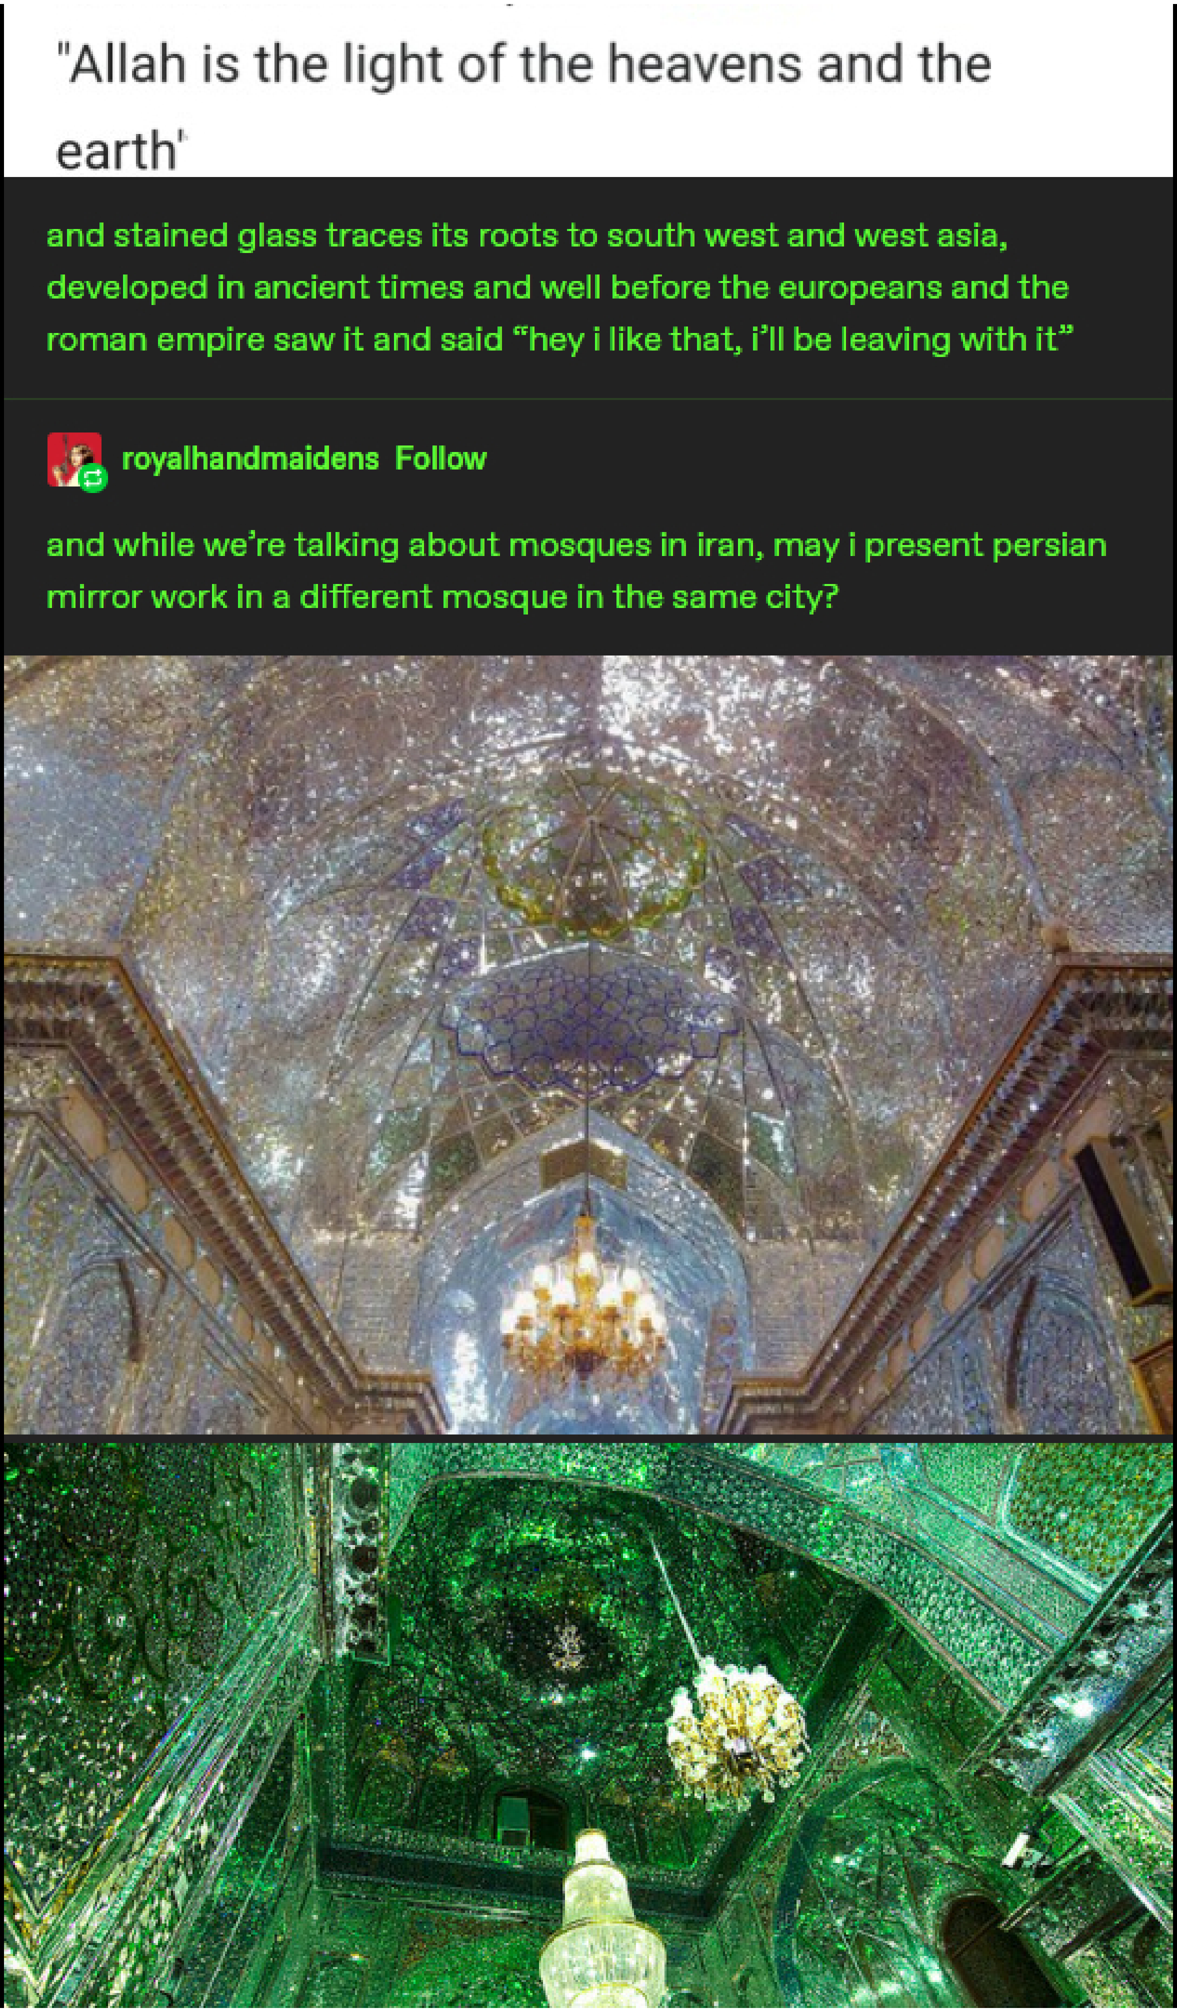
royalhandmaidens Follow

i absolutely love seeing people's reactions to the pink mosque 😂

the style is called "orsi" and is unique to iran

Orsi differs from stained glass used in many churches and Ottoman mosques which serve as illuminated images rather than a source of light. Light is a major feature in many mosques considering it being a major symbol of God in Islam. This is mentioned in a chapter in Quran:



"Allah is the light of the heavens and the earth' and stained glass traces its roots to south west and west asia, developed in ancient times and well before the europeans and the roman empire saw it and said "hey i like that, i'll be leaving with it"

and while we're talking about mosques in iran, may i present persian mirror work in a different mosque in the same city?

my-username-is-classified Follow

@ everyone in the notes talking about physical performance: if that were the case, then sports would be divided by physical performance. that's a thing you can measure. that's a thing that varies by individual. a weak man and a strong man would be an unfair fight in boxing/wrestling/MMA, which is why they divide those sports up into weight groups based on physical performance. but they also further segregate them based on gender. chess is segregated by gender for no reason but sexism. if it's actually about skill and physical ability, then measure those and separate people by those metrics. don't do some bullshit gender segregation and pretend like men and women are inherently on different levels no matter their individual abilities.

Arts and crafts are perfect for adhd folk bc there's an immediate and visual progress.

Cut fabric, sew it together. You just made clothing.

Put some beads on some twine. You just made jewelry.

You can see your productivity.

Chores are the opposite. Yes, your kitchen is clean now. But you'll cook again that evening or the next day and you'll have to start over. Yes, you vacuumed. But two days later it's dusty again. Laundry done, until next week.

Chores never end.

But arts and crafts, nobody can undo the thing you made. You can hold it up and say "look. I made this. I did the productivity today" and nothing quite beats that serotonin rush.

earthtokk Follow

My ability to do chores improved immensely when I stopped thinking of them as things that can be finished and started thinking of them as cycles. It's no longer "what do I need to do to get the kitchen clean?" but "where am I in the kitchen cycle?" eg dishes go from the cupboard to the table tto the dishwasher and back to the cupboard. If your goal is to finish, you'll always be in a state of failure. If your goal is to keep momentum going, every little step is a success.

That being said, there's nothing more satisfying than finishing a pair of knit mittens.

adhdtogether Follow

This... might really help me. I'm going to try out this mindset and see how it goes.

galadhir Follow

Also, if you have cleaned the kitchen, stop, stand back and give yourself five minutes to look at that clean kitchen. Look how empty the countertops are! Admire the fresh scent. You can't even see where the forks are because they're in their drawer, and the sink is empty. It may be only a stage in the lifecycle of the clean kitchen, but you did that and it's good.

If the entirety of Japan can make a joyful holiday over the beautiful impermanence of the cherry blossom, you can make a moment to give yourself seratonin over the beautiful emptiness of your cleaned kitchen, even if it's not a permanent thing.

This too will pass, but that doesn't mean it wasn't beautiful at the time.

livingthatadhdlife Follow

I once proudly posted a vid of my clean kitchen on insta and a girl replied with "are you okay. You seem to need a lot of validation".

Like. I was just happy with a clean kitchen.

- Pansexuality is not inherently biphobic
- All m-spec labels are valid
- No m-spec label is homophobic
- Non-binary is a valid label
- Trans people do not have to medically transition
- Aces and aros are LGBT. They are oppressed. And if you don't believe that, then you're the one oppressing us.
- Microlabels are all valid
- Neopronouns are valid
- Not identifying with any gender is valid
- Partially identifying with a gender is valid
- Using a gender you made yourself is valid
- Indigenous and ethnic genders are valid
- Not putting a label on yourself is valid
- Just saying you're queer is valid
- Gender is a spectrum, not a binary wrong to ignore them or to discard them indiscriminately as if denying the choices we made. This is why I am against both letting things pile up and dumping things without proper consideration. It is only when we face the things we own one by one and experience the emotions they evoke that we can truly appreciate our relationship with them.

There are three approaches we can take towards our possessions. Face them now, face them sometime, or avoid them until the day we die. The choice is ours. But I personally believe it is far better to face them now. If we acknowledge our attachment to the past and our fears for the future by honestly looking at our possessions, we will be able to see what is really important to us.

This process in turn helps us to identify our values and reduces doubt and confusion when making life decisions. If we can have confidence in our decisions and launch enthusiastically into action without any doubts holding us back, we will be able to > achieve much more. In other words, the sooner we confront our possessions the better. If you are going to put your house in order, do it now.

ATTENTION ALL TUMBLRITES

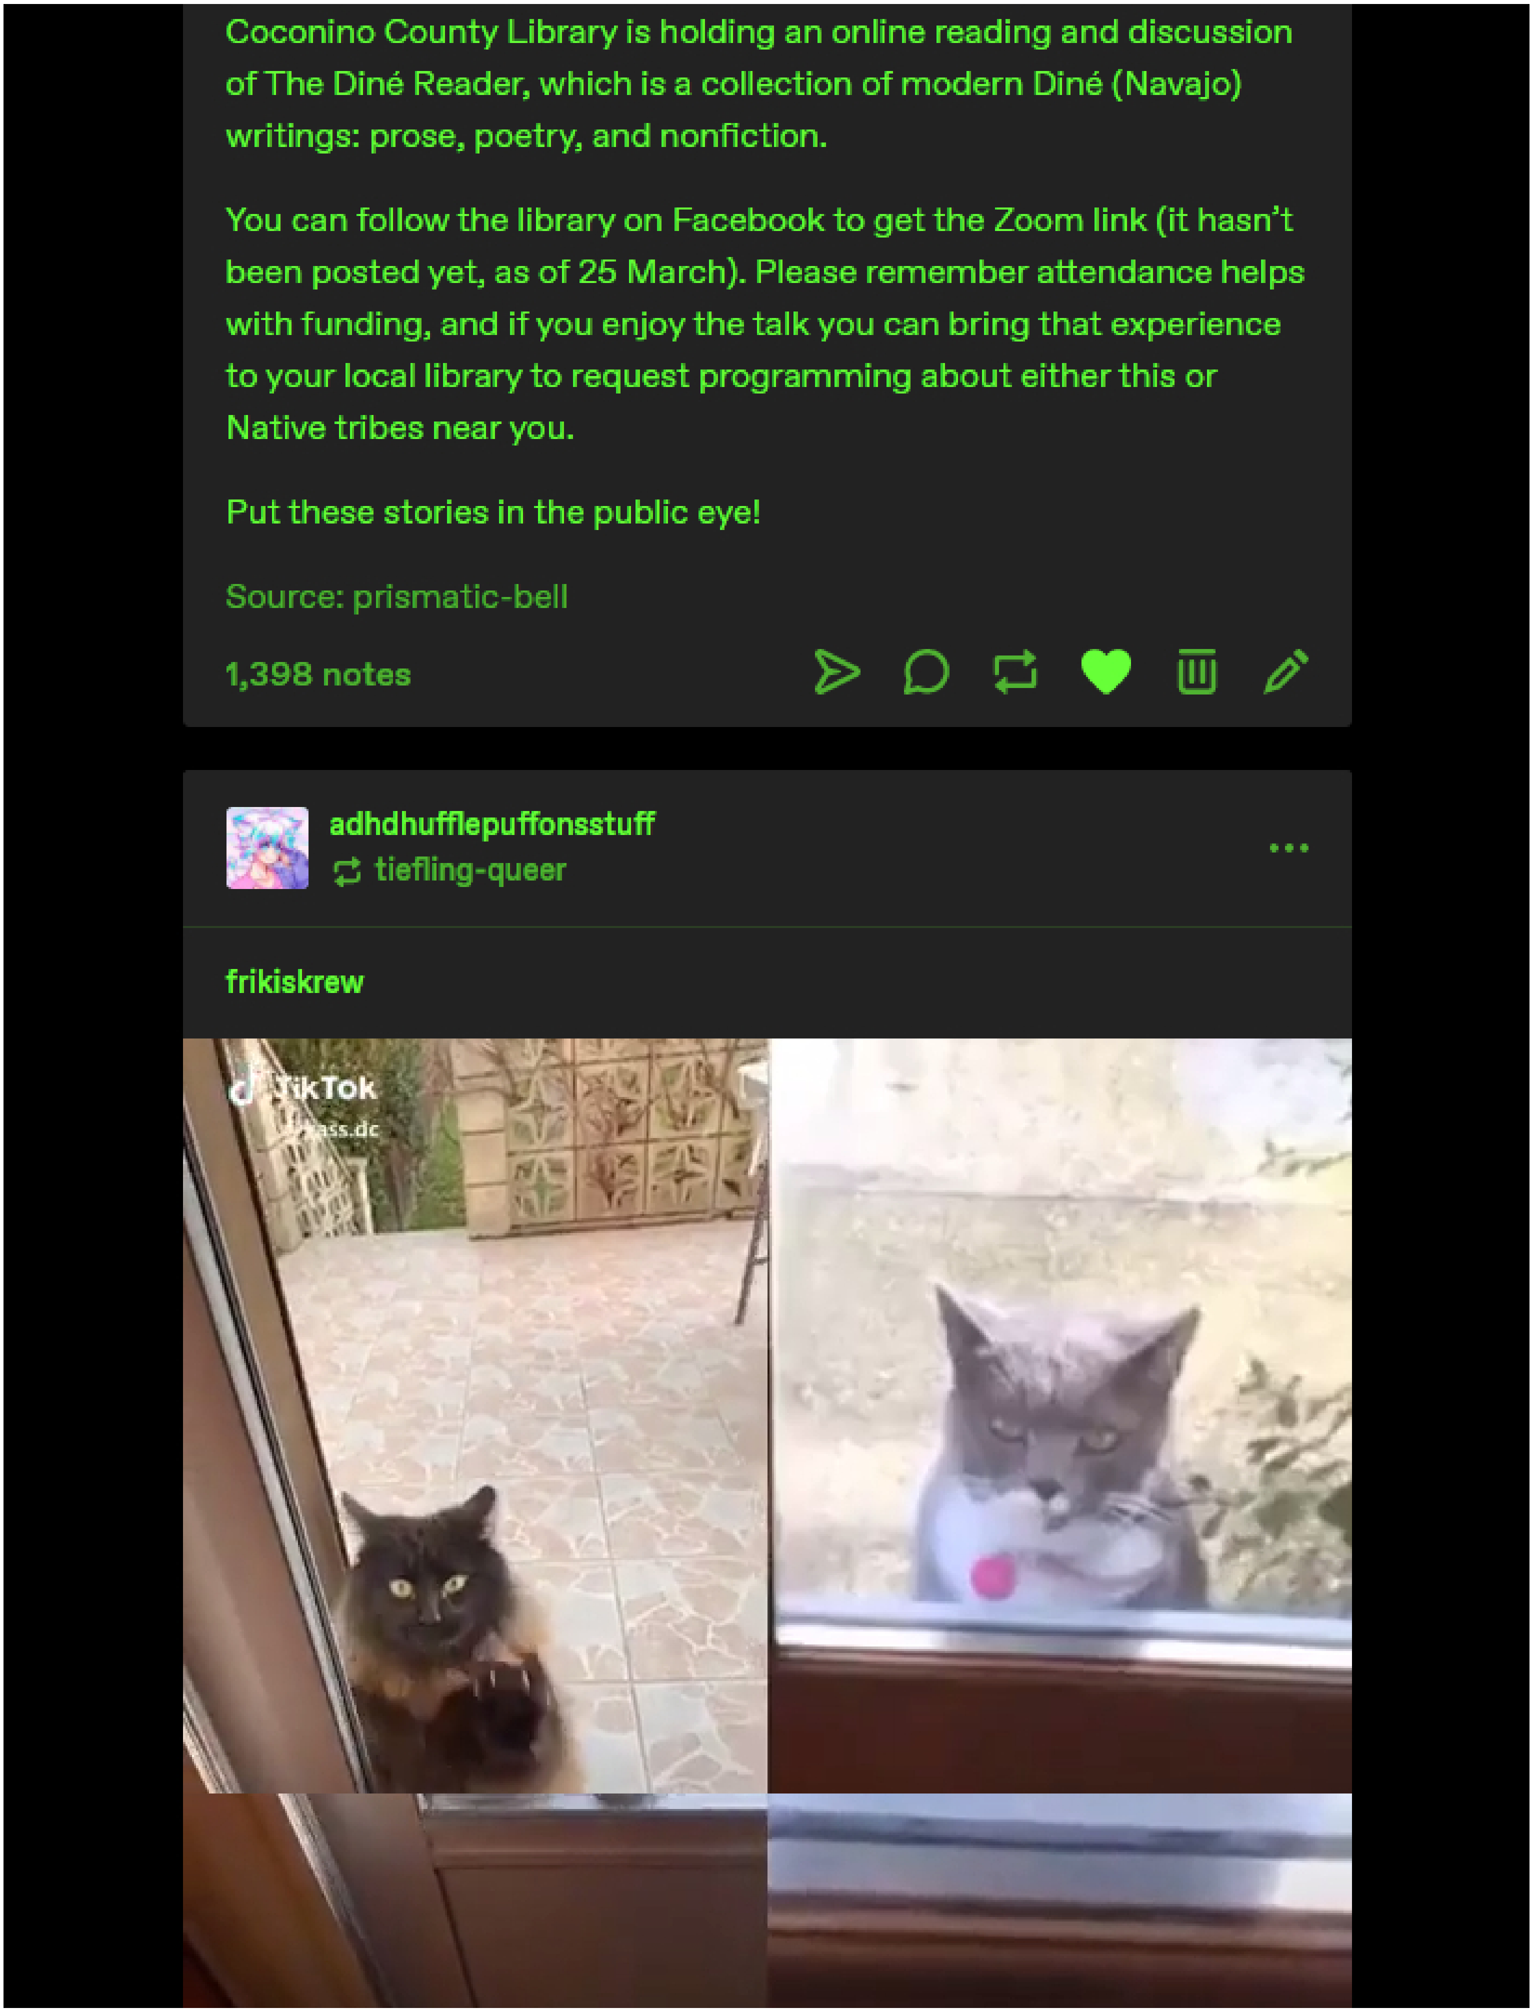
Do you like to talk about Native American rights?

Do you want Native arts and literature to be more accessible and visible in general culture?

Do you want to walk the walk, not just talk the talk?

THEN BOY DO I HAVE AN EVENT FOR YOU, AND IT'S FREE AND YOU CAN ATTEND FROM ANYWHERE.

On Saturday 3 April 2021, from 4-6pm Arizona time (that's 7-9pm Eastern, 6-8pm Central, and 4-6pm Pacific), the Flagstaff—



Coconino County Library is holding an online reading and discussion of The Diné Reader, which is a collection of modern Diné (Navajo) writings: prose, poetry, and nonfiction.

You can follow the library on Facebook to get the Zoom link (it hasn't been posted yet, as of 25 March). Please remember attendance helps with funding, and if you enjoy the talk you can bring that experience to your local library to request programming about either this or Native tribes near you.

Put these stories in the public eye!

Do you think this is a game? This is real. Kinning and shifting to kin realities is not a joke. They killed a real person in real life. Just because you're all jealous because you're not real kins and real kins have to be special to be the true kins and to shift to other realities doesn't mean anything... be icky all you want. This is real and you are jealous. And know that this vile Draco murderer will see justice in the reality the kin enforcers shift them to... don't play around with this stuff. It's dangerous. Fuck around and find out and Shadow and Rogie might just pull you in and show you. Don't mock those who protect you from illegal and gross ships and problematic fiction. The tables can turn on you and this is not a joke. Take it seriously. Demons are real and this is how they manifest. Pray for angels to save you. Maybe Cas if you're lucky. Castiel Winchester is the only one who can protect you at this point after mocking this. So beware. Sam Winchester will murk your ass and Dean won't care. He will just cover it up and move on.

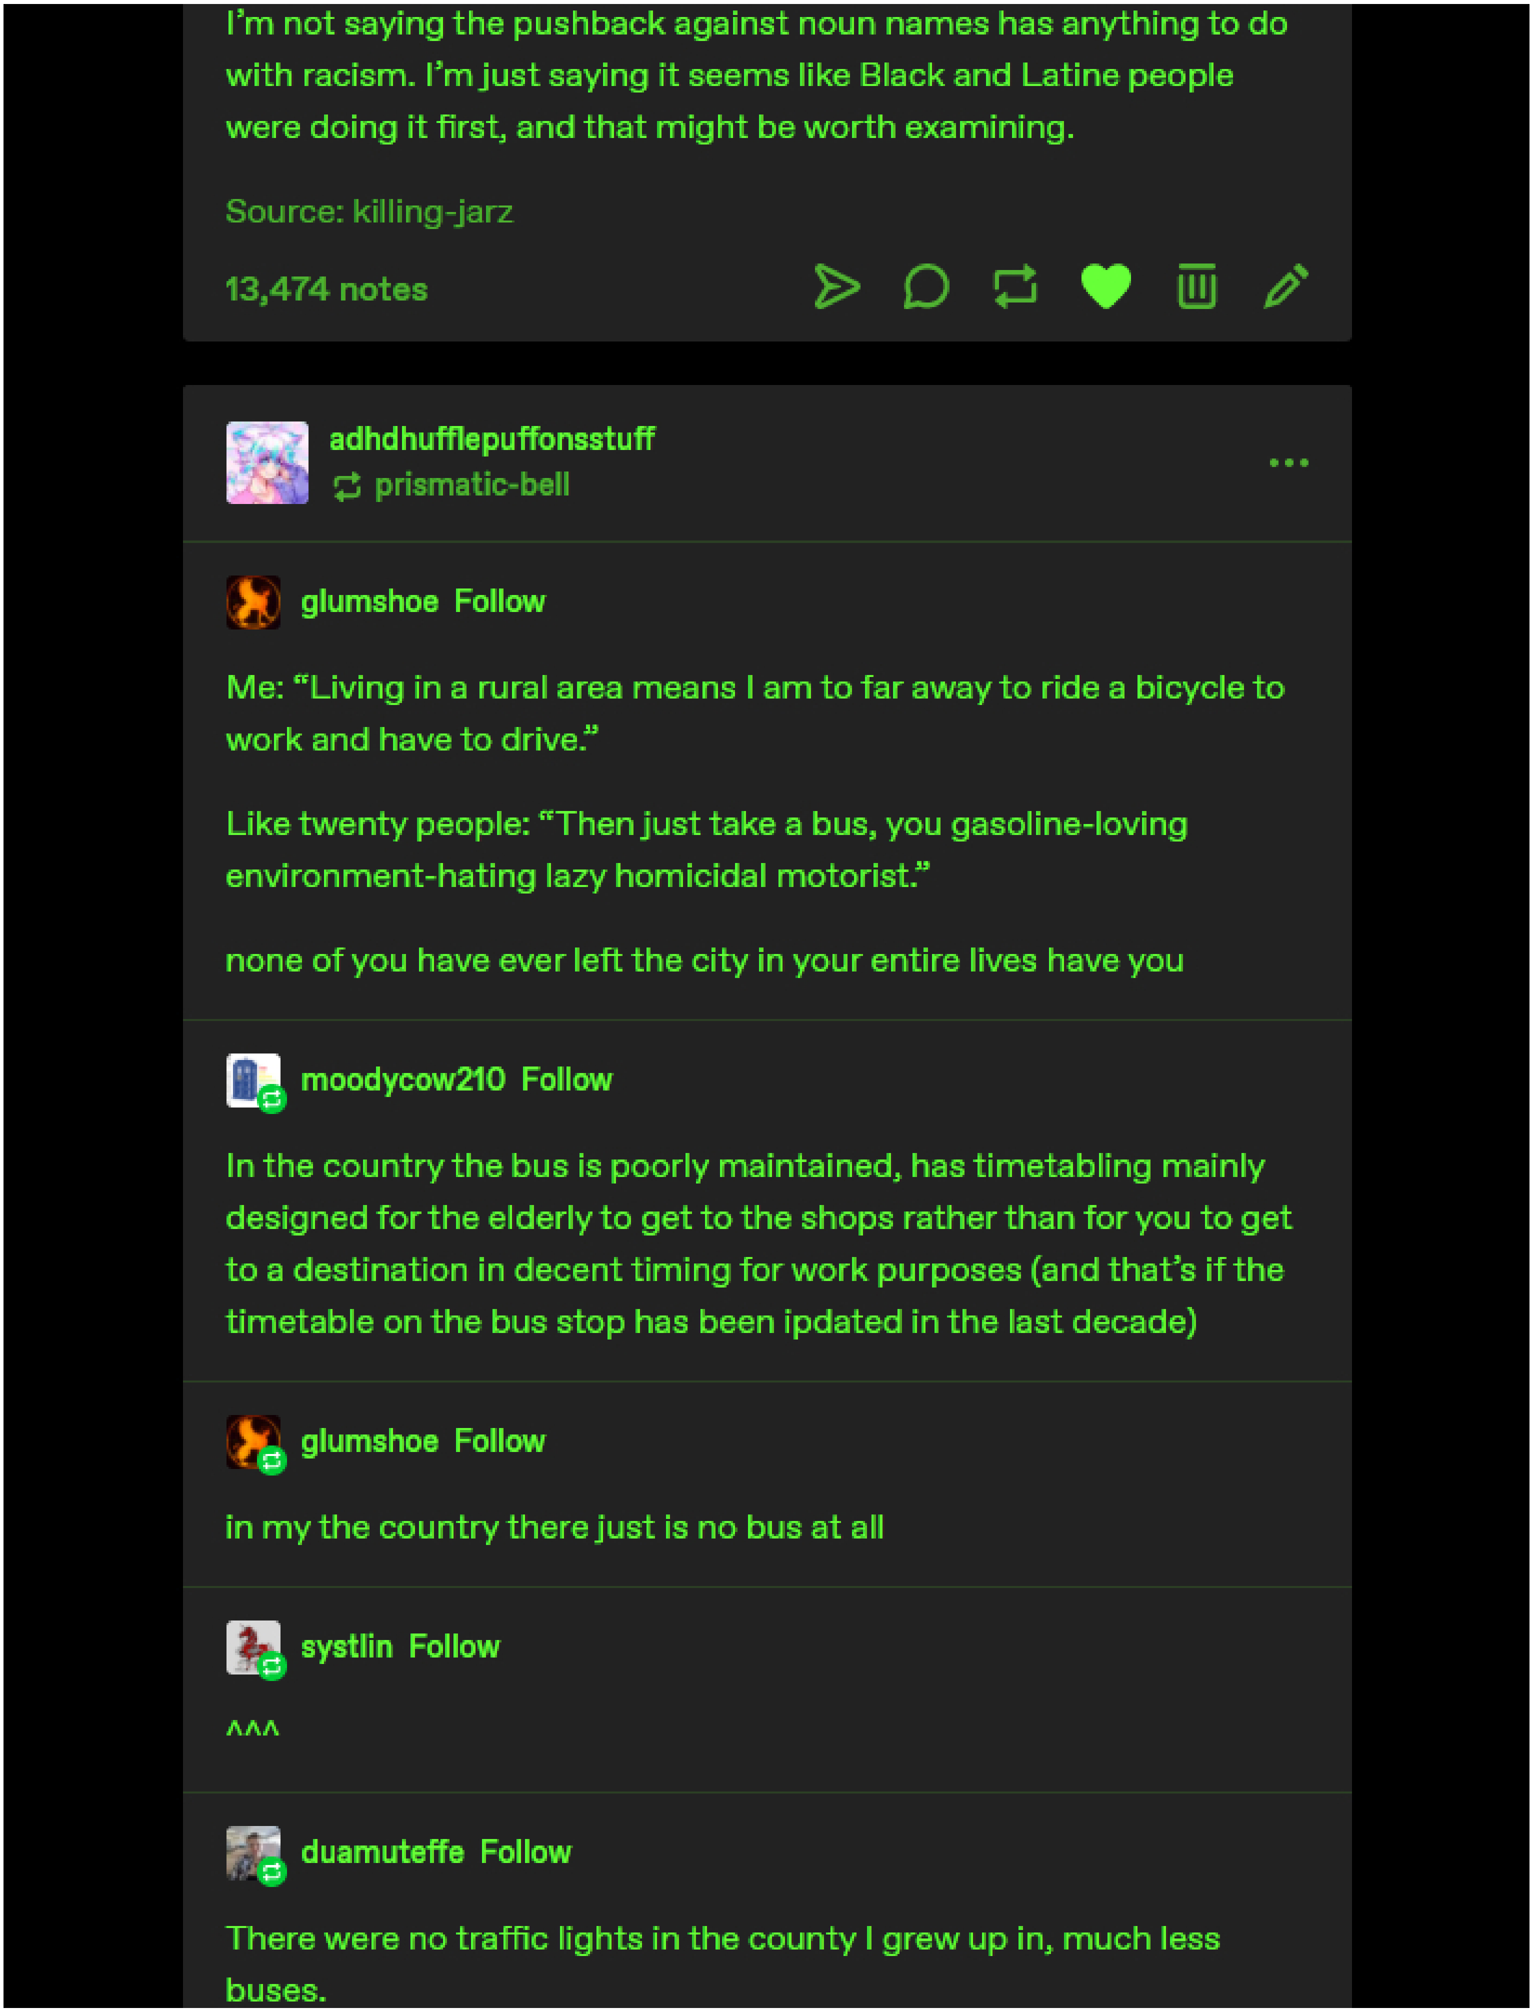
Now you know what's interesting?

Almost none of those people were white. I've never met a white Lyric or Diamond, and only one white Genesis. Angel is almost exclusively Latine.



I'm not saying the pushback against noun names has anything to do with racism. I'm just saying it seems like Black and Latine people were doing it first, and that might be worth examining.

vegans who refuse to even eat backyard eggs....why

despazito Follow

people who think its unethical to eat chicken eggs are like people who think bees should keep all their honey. they literally produce more than they need and your unwillingness to even buy local means you are doing nothing to help them, support your small farmers you heathens

feminist-james

This is not true.

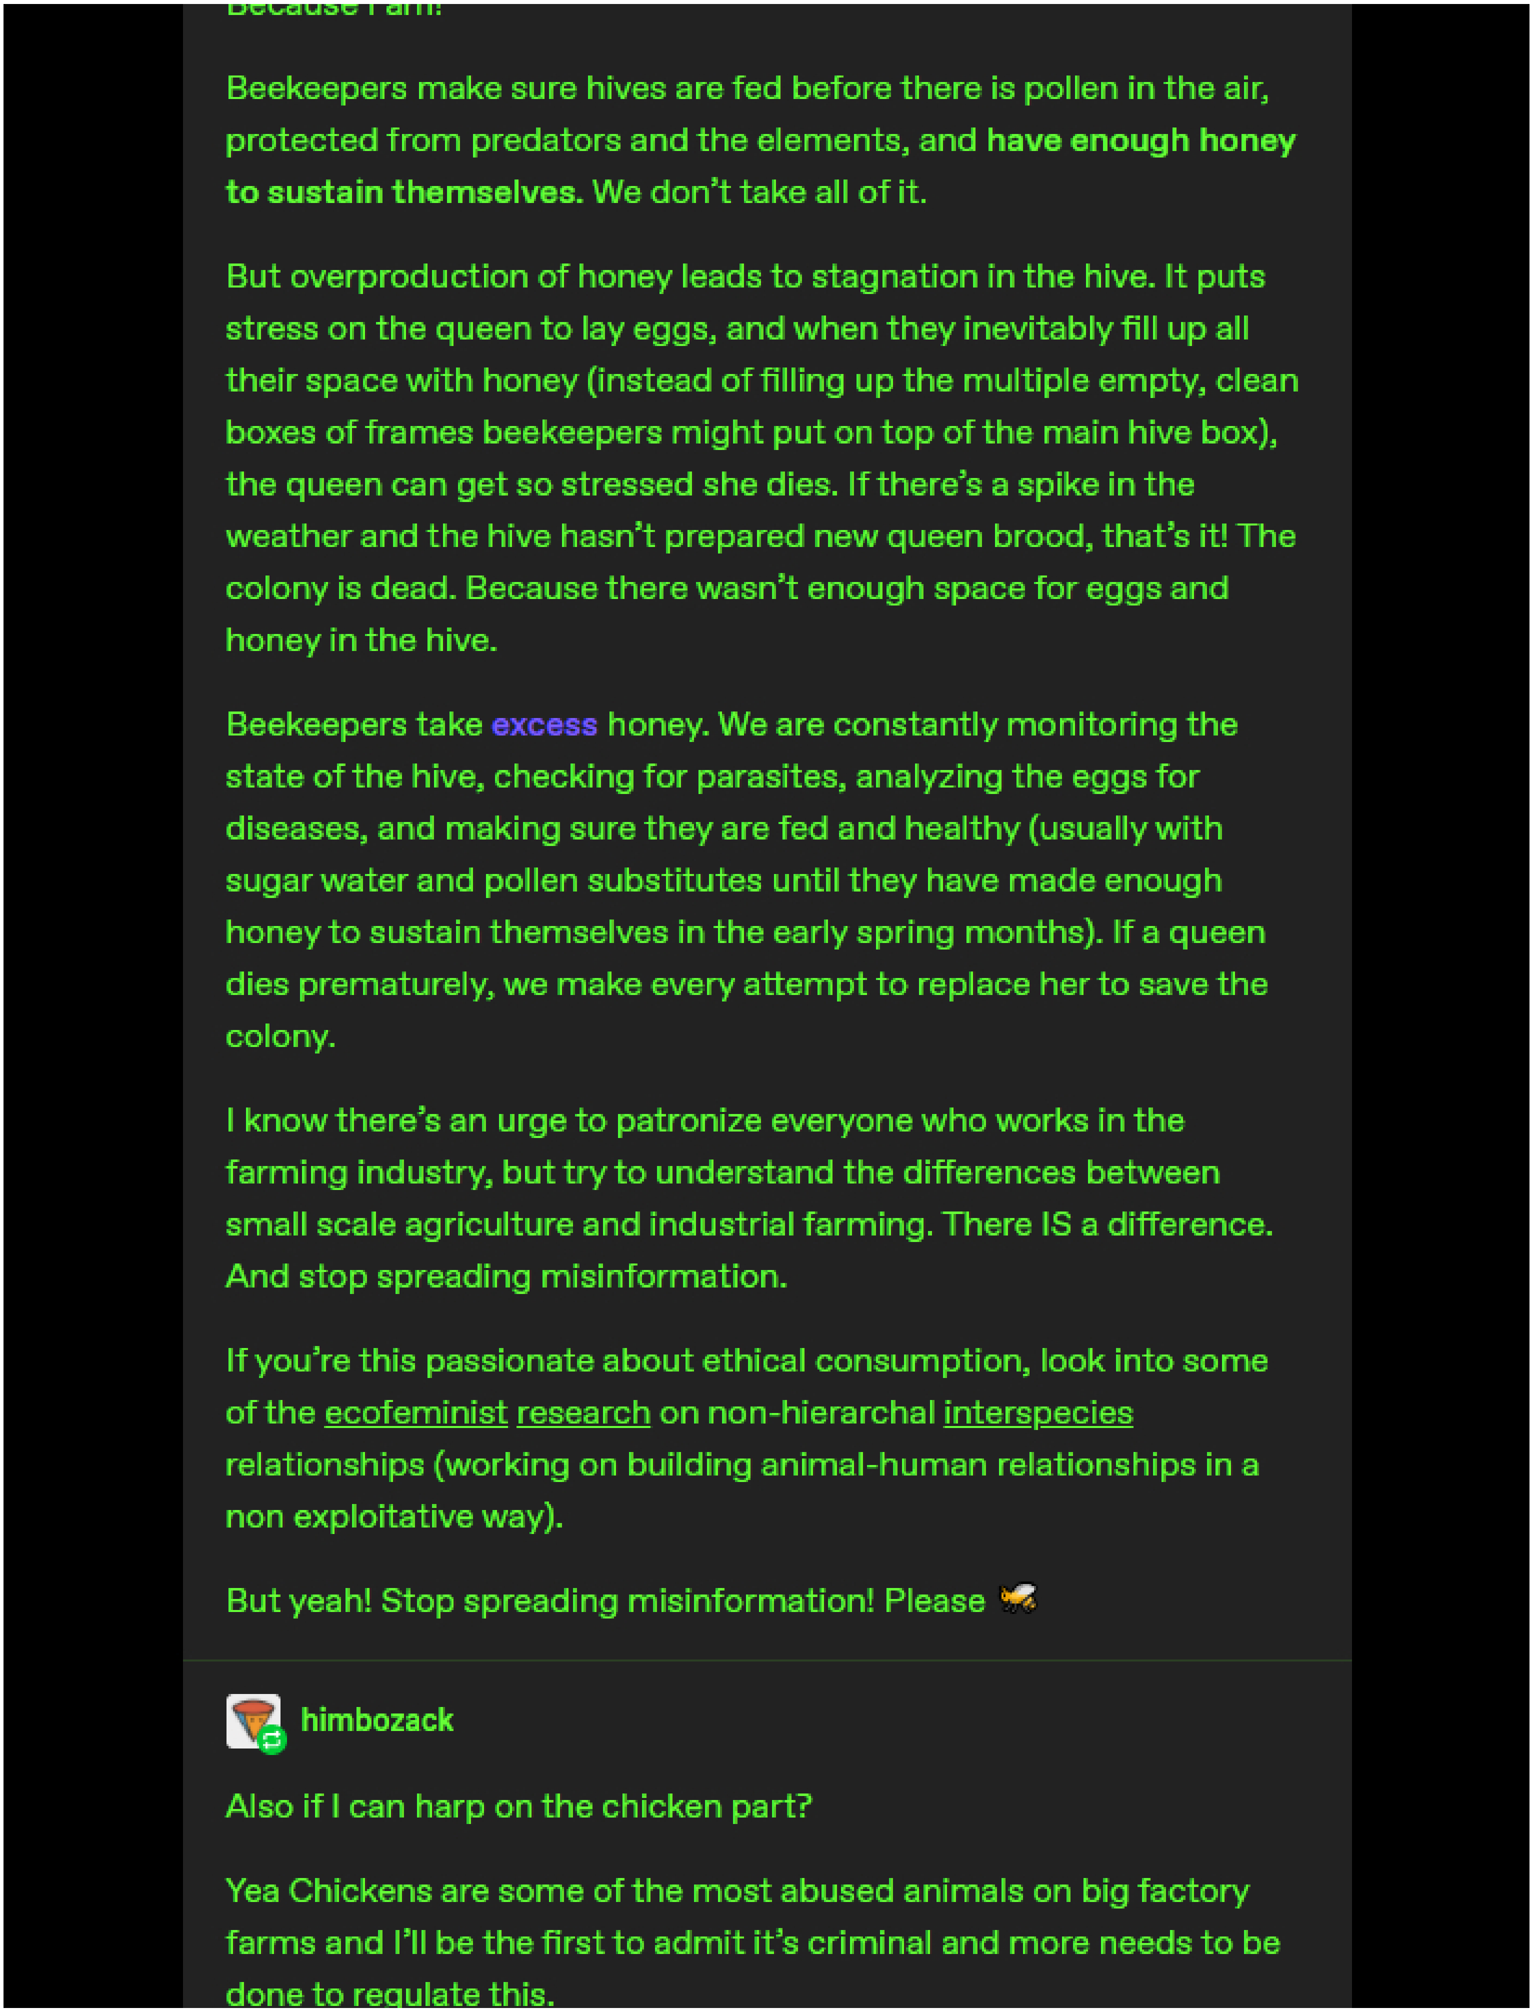
1) honeybees do not produce "extra honey." And beekeepers don't take some of the honey, they take all of it.

2) chickens have been artificially selected from naturally producing eggs once a month to producing eggs every couple of days. Their bodies are not sustainable and the health complications of this rapid egg production kills chickens.

spoonfulofwhoopass Follow

Hey idk who like. Lied to you about the way honey farms work, but could you stop spreading misinformation? Are you a beekeeper?

Because I am!



Because I am!

Beekeepers make sure hives are fed before there is pollen in the air, protected from predators and the elements, and have enough honey to sustain themselves. We don't take all of it.

But overproduction of honey leads to stagnation in the hive. It puts stress on the queen to lay eggs, and when they inevitably fill up all their space with honey (instead of filling up the multiple empty, clean boxes of frames beekeepers might put on top of the main hive box), the queen can get so stressed she dies. If there's a spike in the weather and the hive hasn't prepared new queen brood, that's it! The colony is dead. Because there wasn't enough space for eggs and honey in the hive.

Beekeepers take excess honey. We are constantly monitoring the state of the hive, checking for parasites, analyzing the eggs for diseases, and making sure they are fed and healthy (usually with sugar water and pollen substitutes until they have made enough honey to sustain themselves in the early spring months). If a queen dies prematurely, we make every attempt to replace her to save the colony.

I know there's an urge to patronize everyone who works in the farming industry, but try to understand the differences between small scale agriculture and industrial farming. There IS a difference. And stop spreading misinformation.

If you're this passionate about ethical consumption, look into some of the ecofeminist research on non-hierarchal interspecies relationships (working on building animal-human relationships in a non exploitative way).

But yeah! Stop spreading misinformation! Please 🐝 himbozack

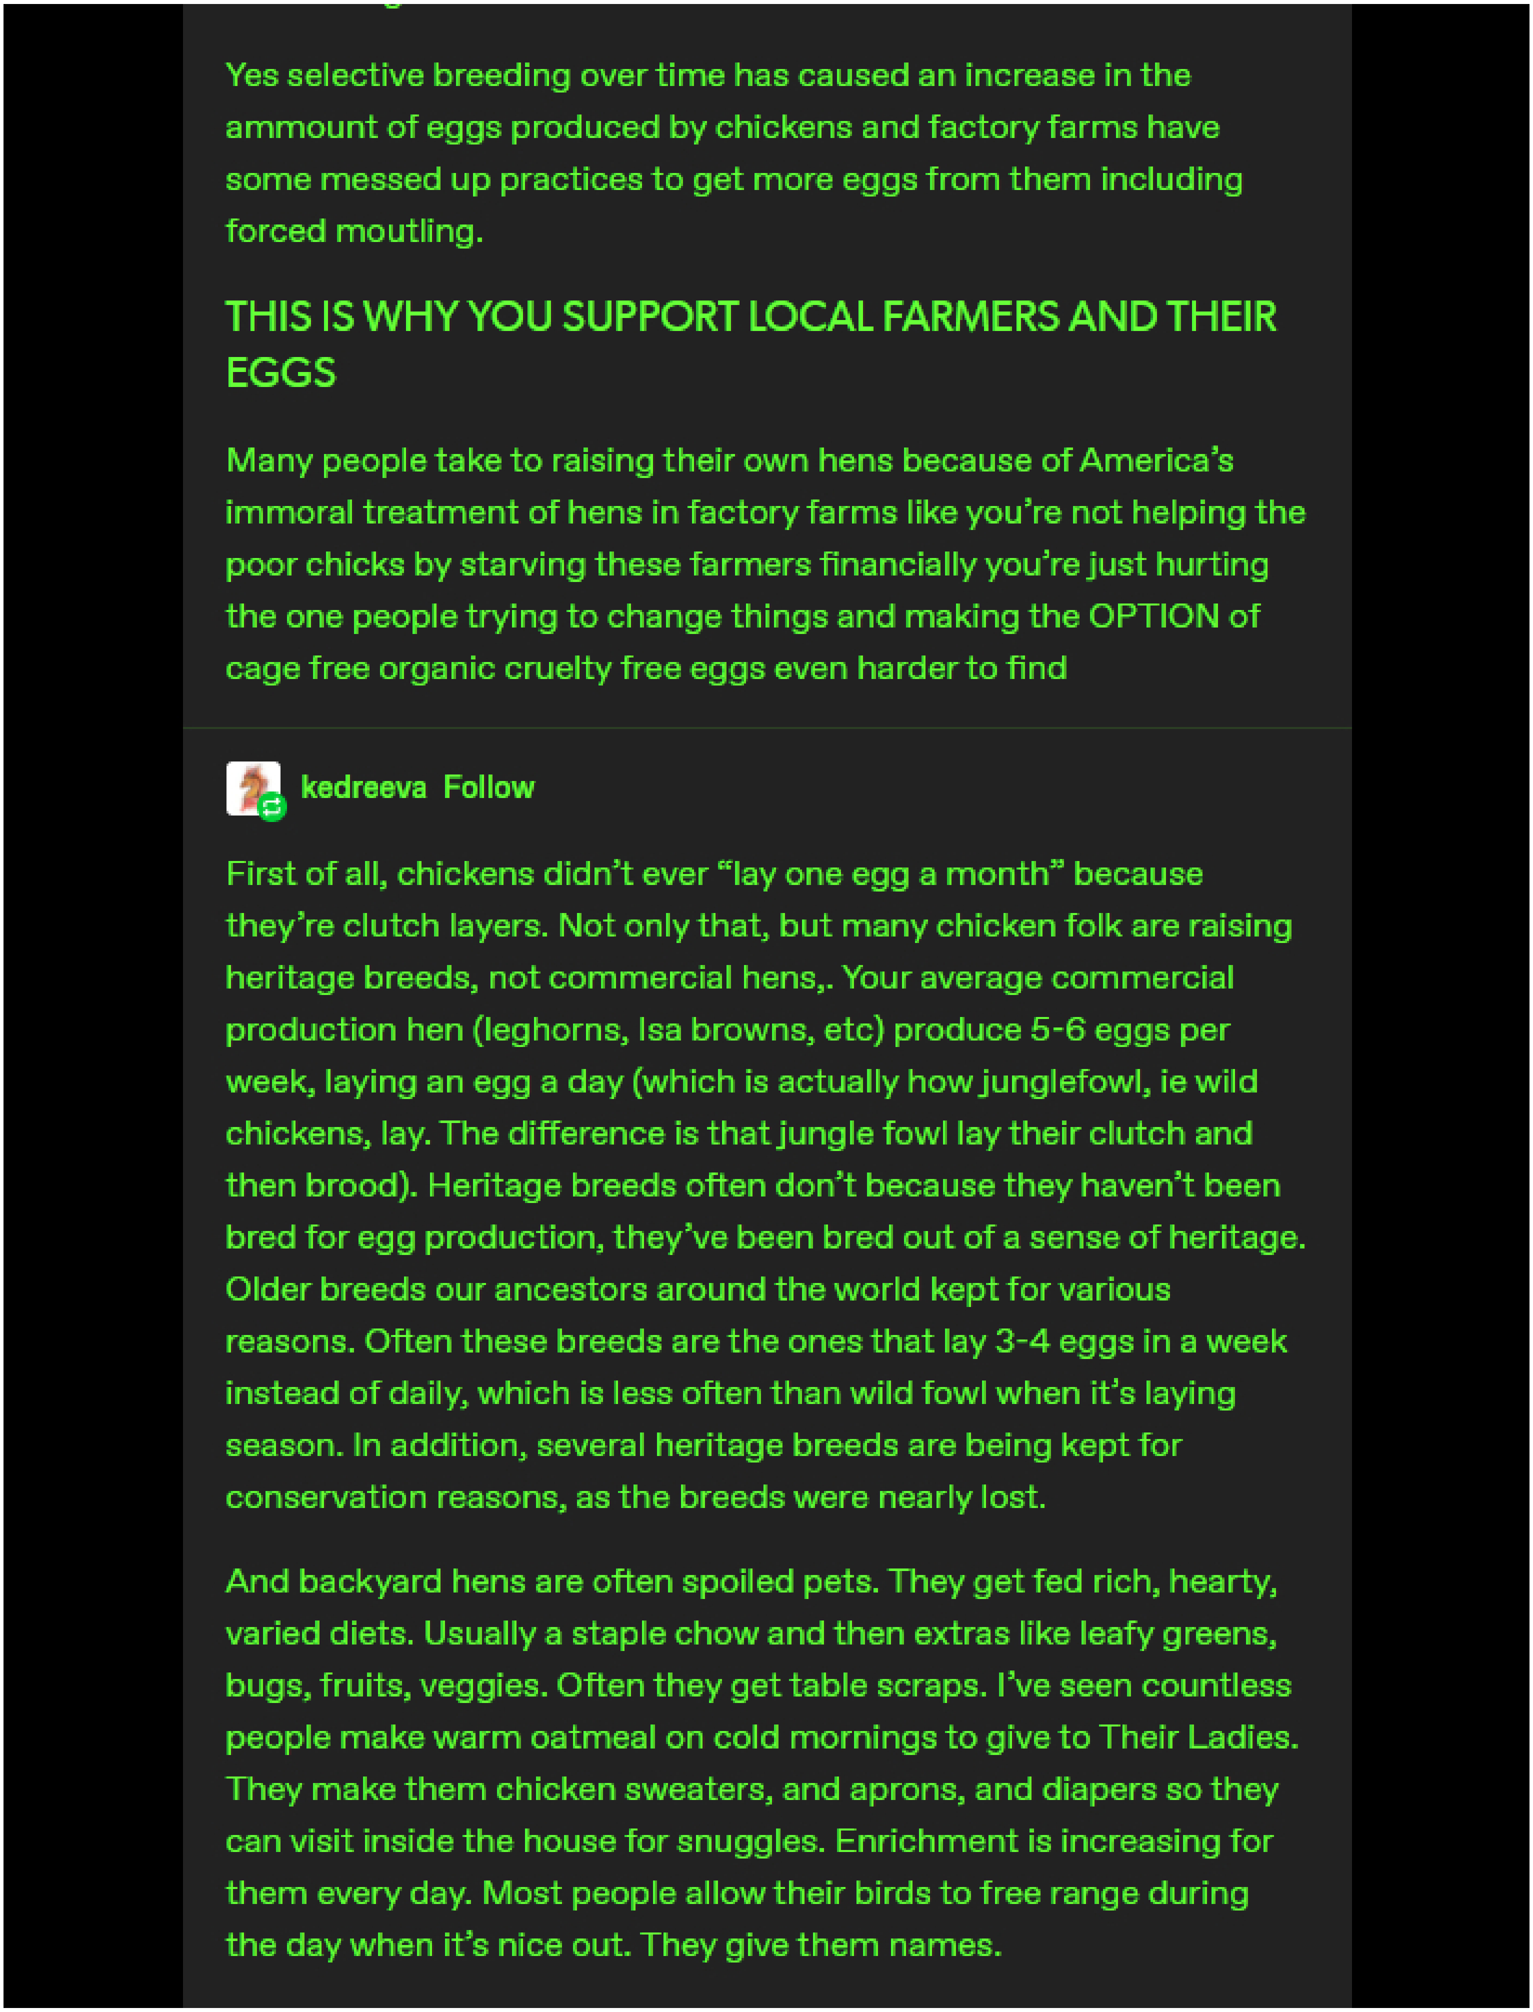
Also if I can harp on the chicken part?

Yea Chickens are some of the most abused animals on big factory farms and I'll be the first to admit it's criminal and more needs to be done to regulate this.



Yes selective breeding over time has caused an increase in the ammount of eggs produced by chickens and factory farms have some messed up practices to get more eggs from them including forced moutling.

THIS IS WHY YOU SUPPORT LOCAL FARMERS AND THEIR EGGS

Many people take to raising their own hens because of America's immoral treatment of hens in factory farms like you're not helping the poor chicks by starving these farmers financially you're just hurting the one people trying to change things and making the OPTION of cage free organic cruelty free eggs even harder to find

kedreeva Follow

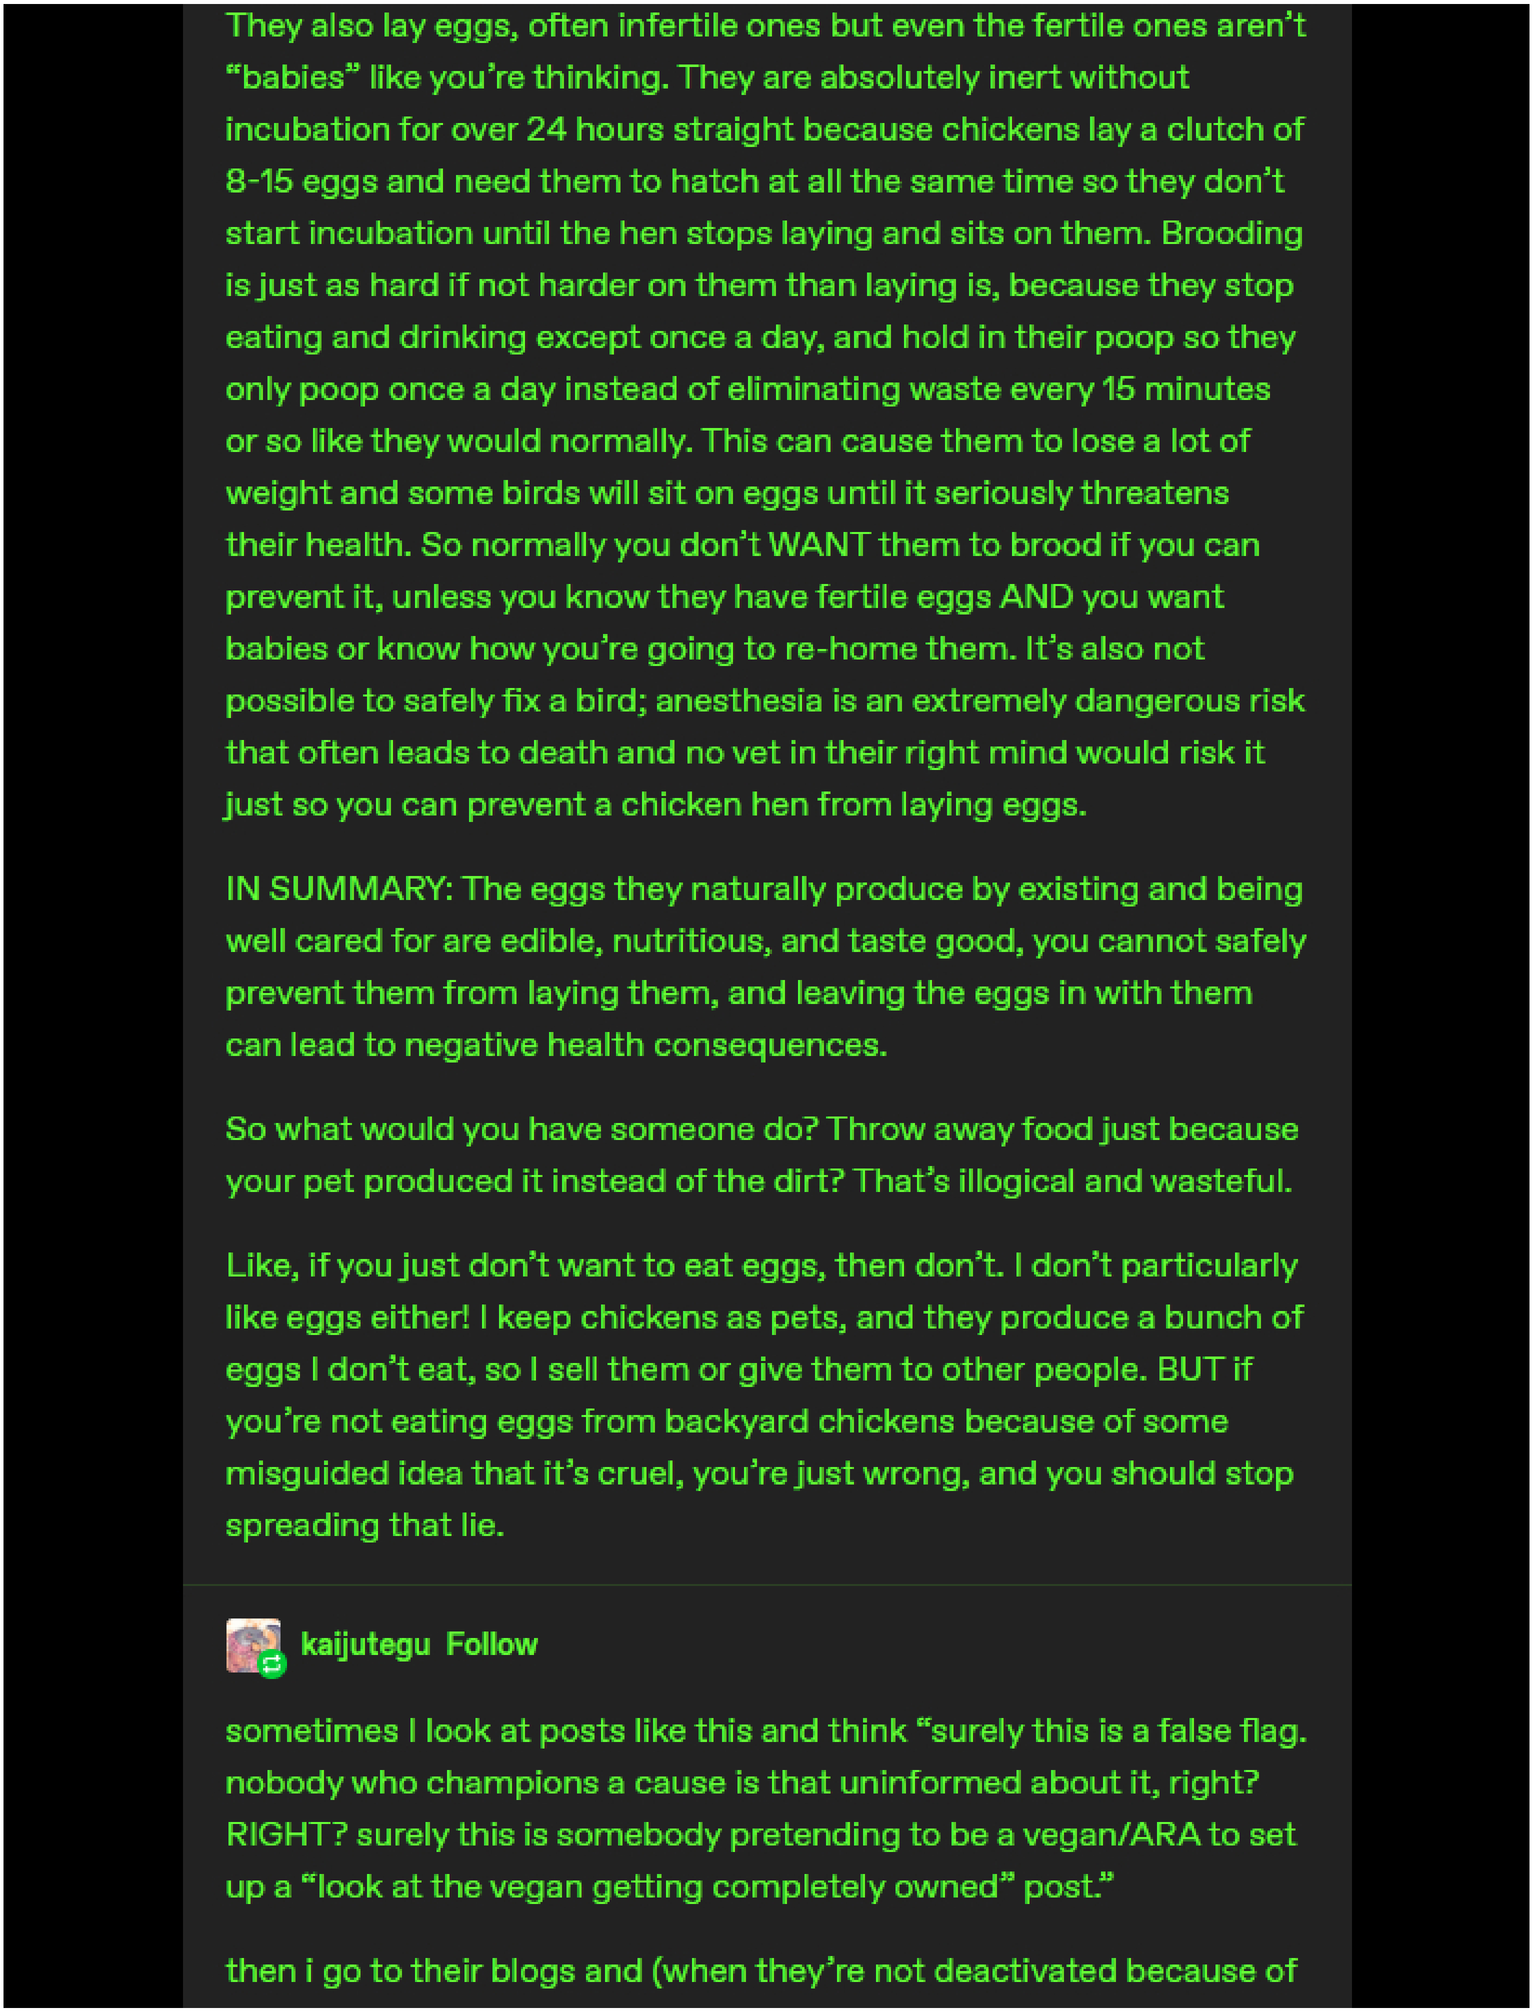
First of all, chickens didn't ever "lay one egg a month" because they're clutch layers. Not only that, but many chicken folk are raising heritage breeds, not commercial hens,. Your average commercial production hen (leghorns, Isa browns, etc) produce 5-6 eggs per week, laying an egg a day (which is actually how junglefowl, ie wild chickens, lay. The difference is that jungle fowl lay their clutch and then brood). Heritage breeds often don't because they haven't been bred for egg production, they've been bred out of a sense of heritage. Older breeds our ancestors around the world kept for various reasons. Often these breeds are the ones that lay 3-4 eggs in a week instead of daily, which is less often than wild fowl when it's laying season. In addition, several heritage breeds are being kept for conservation reasons, as the breeds were nearly lost.

And backyard hens are often spoiled pets. They get fed rich, hearty, varied diets. Usually a staple chow and then extras like leafy greens, bugs, fruits, veggies. Often they get table scraps. I've seen countless people make warm oatmeal on cold mornings to give to Their Ladies. They make them chicken sweaters, and aprons, and diapers so they can visit inside the house for snuggles. Enrichment is increasing for them every day. Most people allow their birds to free range during the day when it's nice out. They give them names.



They also lay eggs, often infertile ones but even the fertile ones aren't "babies" like you're thinking. They are absolutely inert without incubation for over 24 hours straight because chickens lay a clutch of 8-15 eggs and need them to hatch at all the same time so they don't start incubation until the hen stops laying and sits on them. Brooding is just as hard if not harder on them than laying is, because they stop eating and drinking except once a day, and hold in their poop so they only poop once a day instead of eliminating waste every 15 minutes or so like they would normally. This can cause them to lose a lot of weight and some birds will sit on eggs until it seriously threatens their health. So normally you don't WANT them to brood if you can prevent it, unless you know they have fertile eggs AND you want babies or know how you're going to re-home them. It's also not possible to safely fix a bird; anesthesia is an extremely dangerous risk that often leads to death and no vet in their right mind would risk it just so you can prevent a chicken hen from laying eggs.

IN SUMMARY: The eggs they naturally produce by existing and being well cared for are edible, nutritious, and taste good, you cannot safely prevent them from laying them, and leaving the eggs in with them can lead to negative health consequences.

So what would you have someone do? Throw away food just because your pet produced it instead of the dirt? That's illogical and wasteful.

Like, if you just don't want to eat eggs, then don't. I don't particularly like eggs either! I keep chickens as pets, and they produce a bunch of eggs I don't eat, so I sell them or give them to other people. BUT if you're not eating eggs from backyard chickens because of some misguided idea that it's cruel, you're just wrong, and you should stop spreading that lie.

then i go to their blogs and (when they're not deactivated because of the vegan getting completely owned post) oh my god they are real, they just don't actually know anything about the thing they hate. they have no idea how beekeeping, small-scale chickenkeeping, or anything in the animal ag industry actually works. they've completely bought into the lie that small-scale production is just as bad for animals and the environment as factory farming.

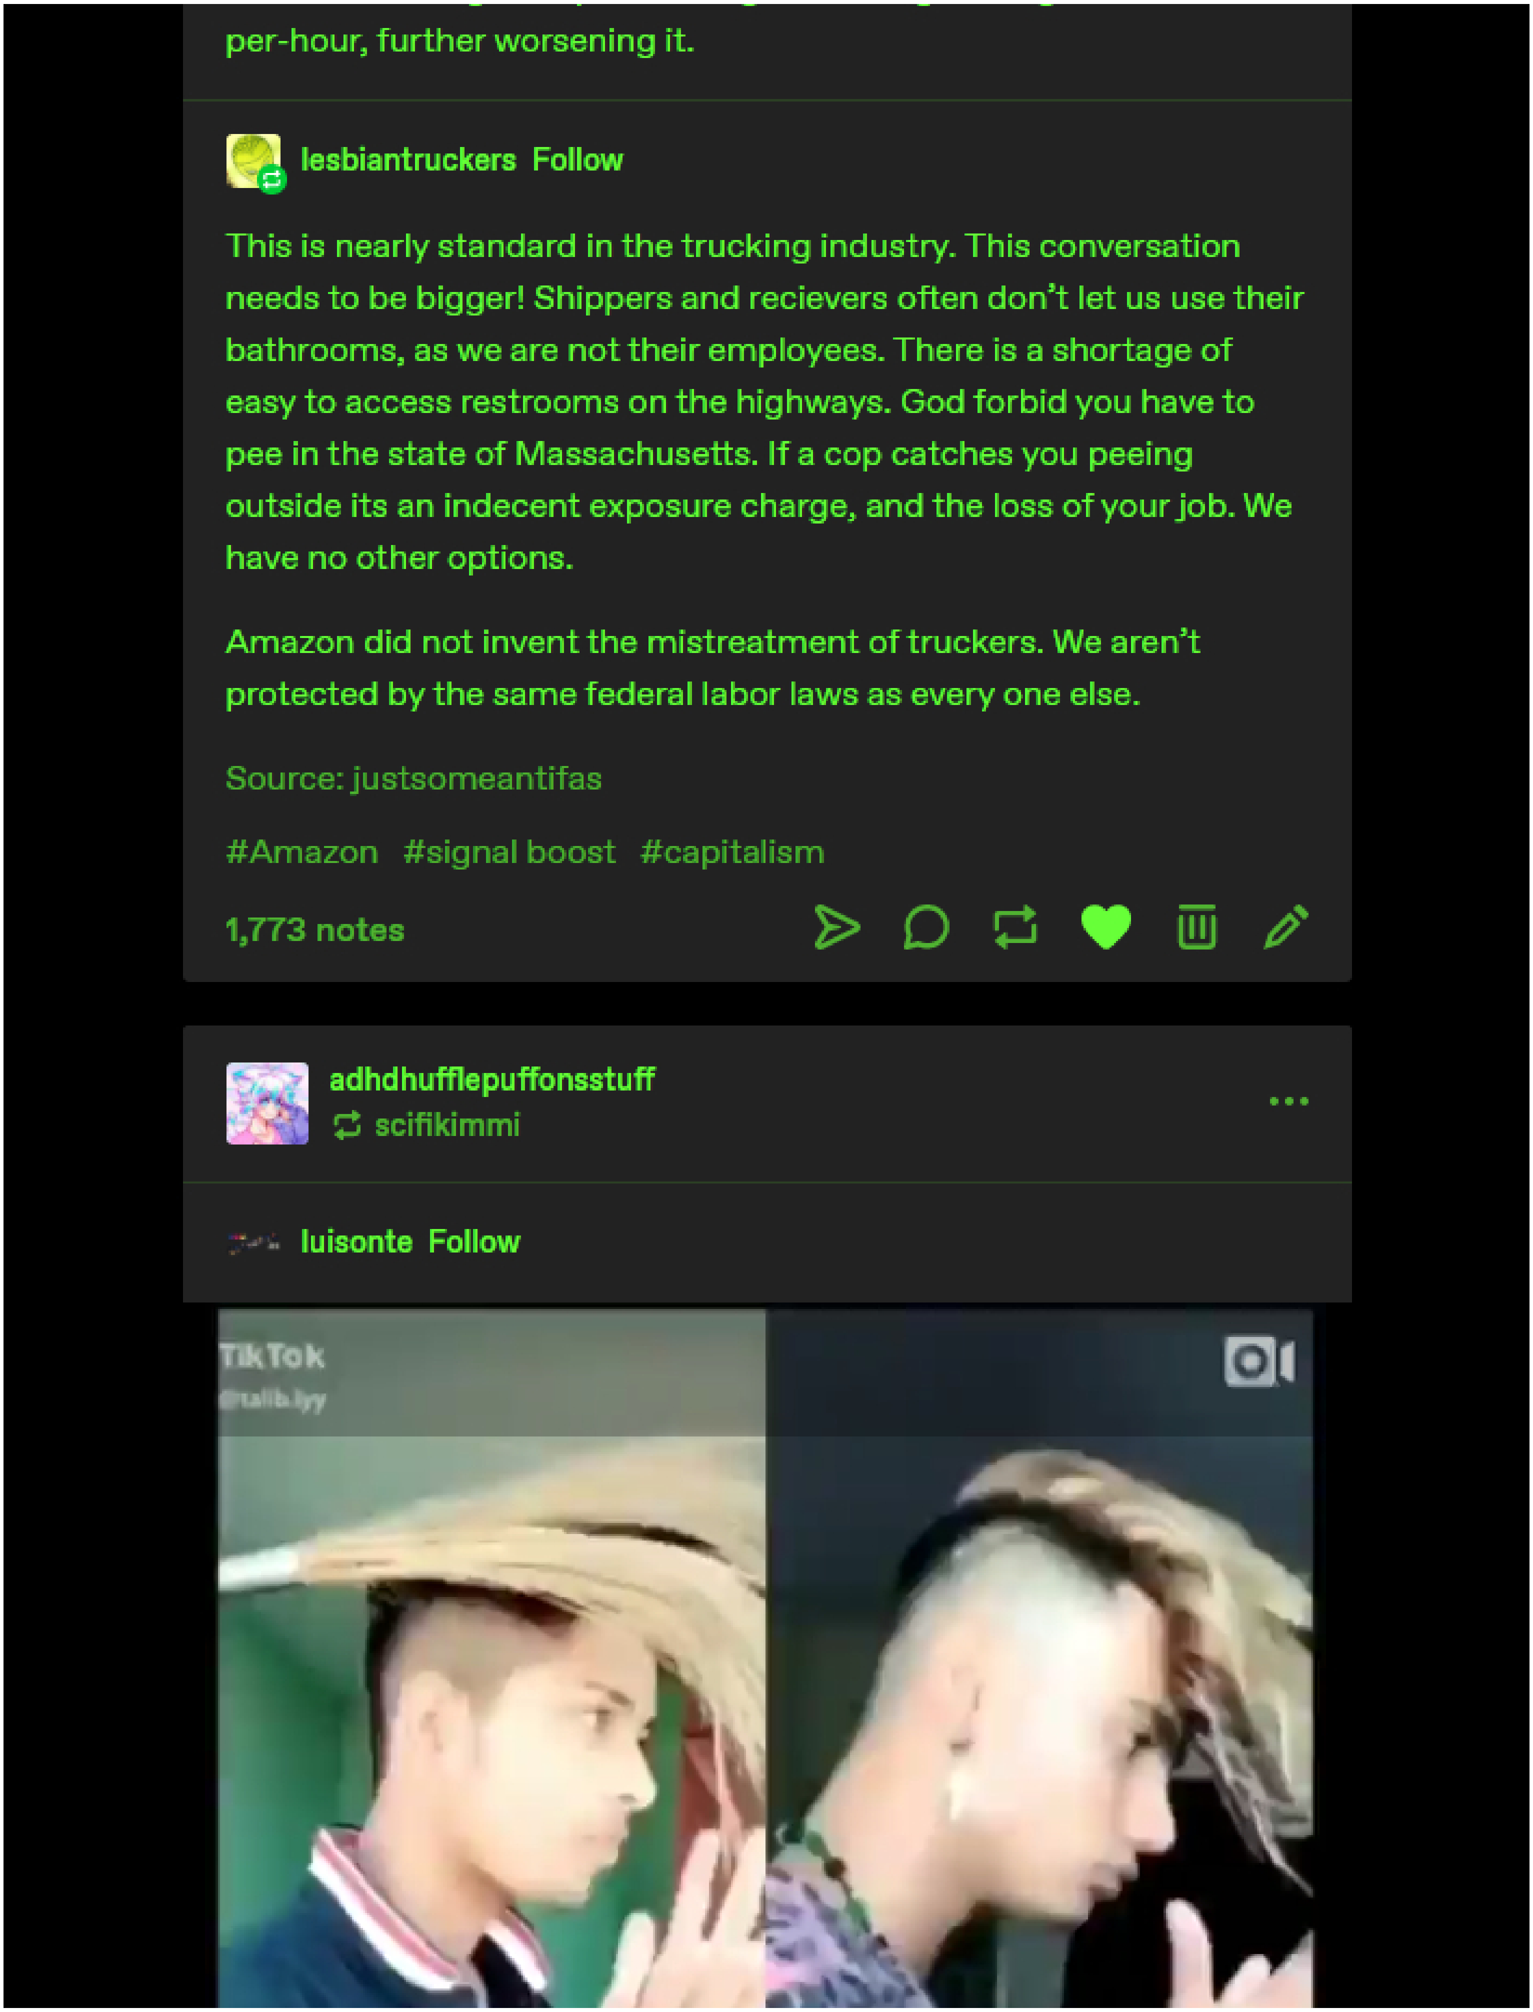
Documents Show Amazon Is Aware Drivers Pee in Bottles and Even Defecate En Route, Despite Company Denial

If employees actually had to pee in bottles, Amazon said, "nobody would work for us." That's a lie.

THEINTERCEPT.COM

TL;DR: Amazon is of course fully aware that their workers (this article mainly focuses on delivery drivers) are forced to pee in bottles and shit in bags while working, but treats it as an infraction on the part of the worker (!!) that the worker then needs to be disciplined for, as opposed to a reflection on their repulsive practices.

Workers interviewed say that as this issue becomes more prevalent, Amazon has begun to push for higher and higher targets of items-



per-hour, further worsening it.

lesbiantruckers Follow

This is nearly standard in the trucking industry. This conversation needs to be bigger! Shippers and recievers often don't let us use their bathrooms, as we are not their employees. There is a shortage of easy to access restrooms on the highways. God forbid you have to pee in the state of Massachusetts. If a cop catches you peeing outside its an indecent exposure charge, and the loss of your job. We have no other options.

Amazon did not invent the mistreatment of truckers. We aren't protected by the same federal labor laws as every one else.

if u consider yourself a horror fan you like NEED to be aware and educated on the ableism thats been put at the heart of so much horror. like... is that character actually scary or do they just have a limp/scars/disfigurement that real normal people have irl and have to see depicted as horrifying and dehumanizing? if you think any of those things or things like it are scary in ANY context you need to step away from the horror genre and familiarize yourself with the fact that people can and do look like that and they do not deserve to be an object of fear

alarajrogers Follow

I feel like there needs to be more other-direction eugenics horror. The horror of you or your loved one being seen as less than human by someone.

There's a story by Judith Merrill, "That Only A Mother", where a woman who has been exposed to radiation is writing to her husband about her baby daughter, who is unusually intelligent and, according to the letters, has been hitting her speech milestones and other intellectual feats quicker than normal. When the father comes home and meets the baby for the first time, he picks her up and finds that she has no arms and legs. He asks "Why didn't you tell me?" and the mother says, "Is she wet? I didn't know." The father starts to have a meltdown over the "she didn't know" and it describes his hands tightening on the baby.

When I was a child and I read it, my interpretation was, he is so horrified that his baby has no arms and legs that he's going to kill her... and this in turn horrified me. That baby was very much loved by her mother, and she was inquisitive and she was enjoying her life the way babies do, and the father is going to kill her because she doesn't meet his standard of life worthy of life? I don't know if that's what Merrill was going for, or if she would have agreed with the father, but to me it was a horror story about a man confronted with his daughter's differences who refuses to accept them and is going to kill her for them. (I didn't even know I was autistic then, but for some reason stories where someone is singled out and rejected as being worthy of being human because they're disabled resonated with me. Can't imagine why.)

That's the horror I want to see. Not the "deformed character is evil" but "deformed character is the protagonist trying to escape 'normal' people who are trying to kill them." Hell, Hollywood, if you are absolutely insisting that the protagonist has to be able-bodied, make it a mother trying to save her disabled child. But give us some horror about ableism, not horror that uses ableism as a cheap trick to scare the audience.

> A lack of emotional intimacy creates emotional loneliness in both children and adults. Attentive and reliable emotional relationships are the basis of a child's sense of security. Unfortunately, emotionally immature parents are usually too uncomfortable with closeness to give their children the deep emotional connection they need. Parental neglect and rejection in childhood can adversely affect self-confidence and relationships in adulthood, as people repeat old, frustrating patterns and then blame themselves for not being happy. Jirt chose to leave "Bilba" almost exactly the same in English, but he changed the ending to an "O" because in Westron names ending in "a" are masculine.

I'm not going to go on and talk about the last names but those all have special meanings too (except Tûk, which is too iconic to change more than the spelling of, apparently).

The Rohirrim were also Westron speakers first and foremost, so their names are also "translations" into Old English and Proto-Germanic words, i.e. "Eowyn" is a combination of "Eoh" (horse) and "Wynn" (joy/bliss).

"Rohirrim/Rohan" are Sindarin words, but in the books, they call themselves the "Éothéod" which is an Old English/Norse combo that means "horse people." Tolkien tells us in the "Peoples of Middle Earth" that the actual Westron for "Éothéod" is Lohtûr, which means that Eowyn and Eomer's names, which come from the same root word, must also start with the letter L.

it hard to try out new methods even when the current method is no longer effective because it worked up to this point.

a thing that will forever amuse me is the movie fandom's depiction of the relationship between gandalf and pippin. like "haha old man is annoyed by younger man" is funny on its own but what most of them don't know is:

gandalf is an entity, an angelic being taking up human form who is older than time itself. pippin 'i exist to spite god' took is like 17. this is a teenager constantly fucking up an ancient being.

pippin is the biggest minor inconvenience in gandalf's life.

things people can do without getting vaccinated, the more people will get vaccinated. Want to return to campus? Vaccine card. Want to fly? Vaccine card. Book a hotel? Vaccine card. Rent a car? Vaccine card. Return to the office? Vaccine card. Unless a person has a legit medical waiver that prevents them from being vaccinated, they have to create an environment where not being vaccinated is so socially restrictive that people will do it just to be able to do normal "life" stuff.

While I agree with the idea of vaccination, and think it's probably the key to ending this, I don't like the idea of forcing people into medical procedures they really don't want, regardless of what their reasons are. Let's face it: all of us getting vaccinated are part of one big experiment because we truly don't know the long term effects of the vaccine, whether it will need to be a yearly thing, etc. Some people are scared. I was nervous getting my first shot. I chose to be vaccinated, and wish more people would make that choice, but it needs to be their choice.

Reblogging my old friend @moonchild8914 's comments for the same reason I reblogged the post immediately below: I don't agree, for the reason I spelled out in the post below, but I'm not running an echo chamber here. :)

Darlin @instructor144 , I love ya but am with @littleredthebrat and @moonchild8914 on this one though admittedly it's a tough call.

My reasons are many, including the ones those lovely ladies listed and tossing in the inconsistencies of the current (and everchanging) science surrounding covid 19. But in the end, my greatest concern is the slippery slope. It's a phenomenon that's prevalent throughout history in most every political, social, economic, and religious setting dictatorship? No. At least not necessarily or not all at once. But any, and every, step we take relinquishing individual liberty over our thoughts and actions has the potential for paving the way.

Gracias much for opening your wall to thoughts outside of the echo chamber. It's the reason I am pleased to call you a friend @instructor144 .

And it was backed and produced by an independently wealthy woman who refused to let this little show fall to the sidelines because big production companies didn’t want it. A little known fact: Lucille Ball, who owned Desilu Productions (Who bought out Desi Arnez’s portion when they divorced), gave Star Trek the green light. Later, she would save the show from certain cancellation by over-riding her own board and keeping the show.

The producers consulted NASA and other scientific pioneers when creating their world - and in turn, the scientific pioneers looked at what Star Trek had come up with and strove toward recreating it.

■ The so-called "blood explosion" which punctuates the conclusion of Akira Kurosawa's 1962 movie Sanjuro remains one of the most memorable and influential special effects in film history. Production designer Yoshiro Muraki would later recall this scene was filmed in a single take. No such effect had ever been attempted before, as movies of the time rarely showed violence with graphic detail. Filled with uncertainty, Muraki worried the blood spray he'd rigged up wouldn't impress Kurosawa, so he added an extra 30 pounds of pressure to the fluid pump. At the moment the pump was activated, the additional pressure caused the compressor hose attached to actor Tatsuya Nakadai to blow a coupling which created a slight, unintentional delay before the fake blood began to spray, and caused a much larger gush of fluid than planned. It sprayed so powerfully Nakadai claimed it almost lifted him off the ground. His heart sinking, as he believed the delay and over-pressure had ruined the effect, Muraki nervously glanced at director Akira Kurosawa, but Kurosawa only nodded in approval.

Its crazy to think that this iconic visual that has been so ubiquitous in pop culture for so long despite that the source material barely being known by people all came from actors staying in character thru an FX malfunction.

I looked it up, coz it sounds really cool! It seems like your book stays private, so you can only invite people to look at it, like you would a Google Doc. I imagine there's no issues with agents then, as it's not available to the general public.

Reblogging from the previous note, because if you want to be professionally published, you MUST be very careful in how you share your work online. If it is readily available in full for all to see, it may be viewed as previously published and therefore rejected.

As long as this company ensures you content is private and not considered published in any way, it may be safe to use, but always check these things out thoroughly before you use them if you want to go the traditional publishing route!

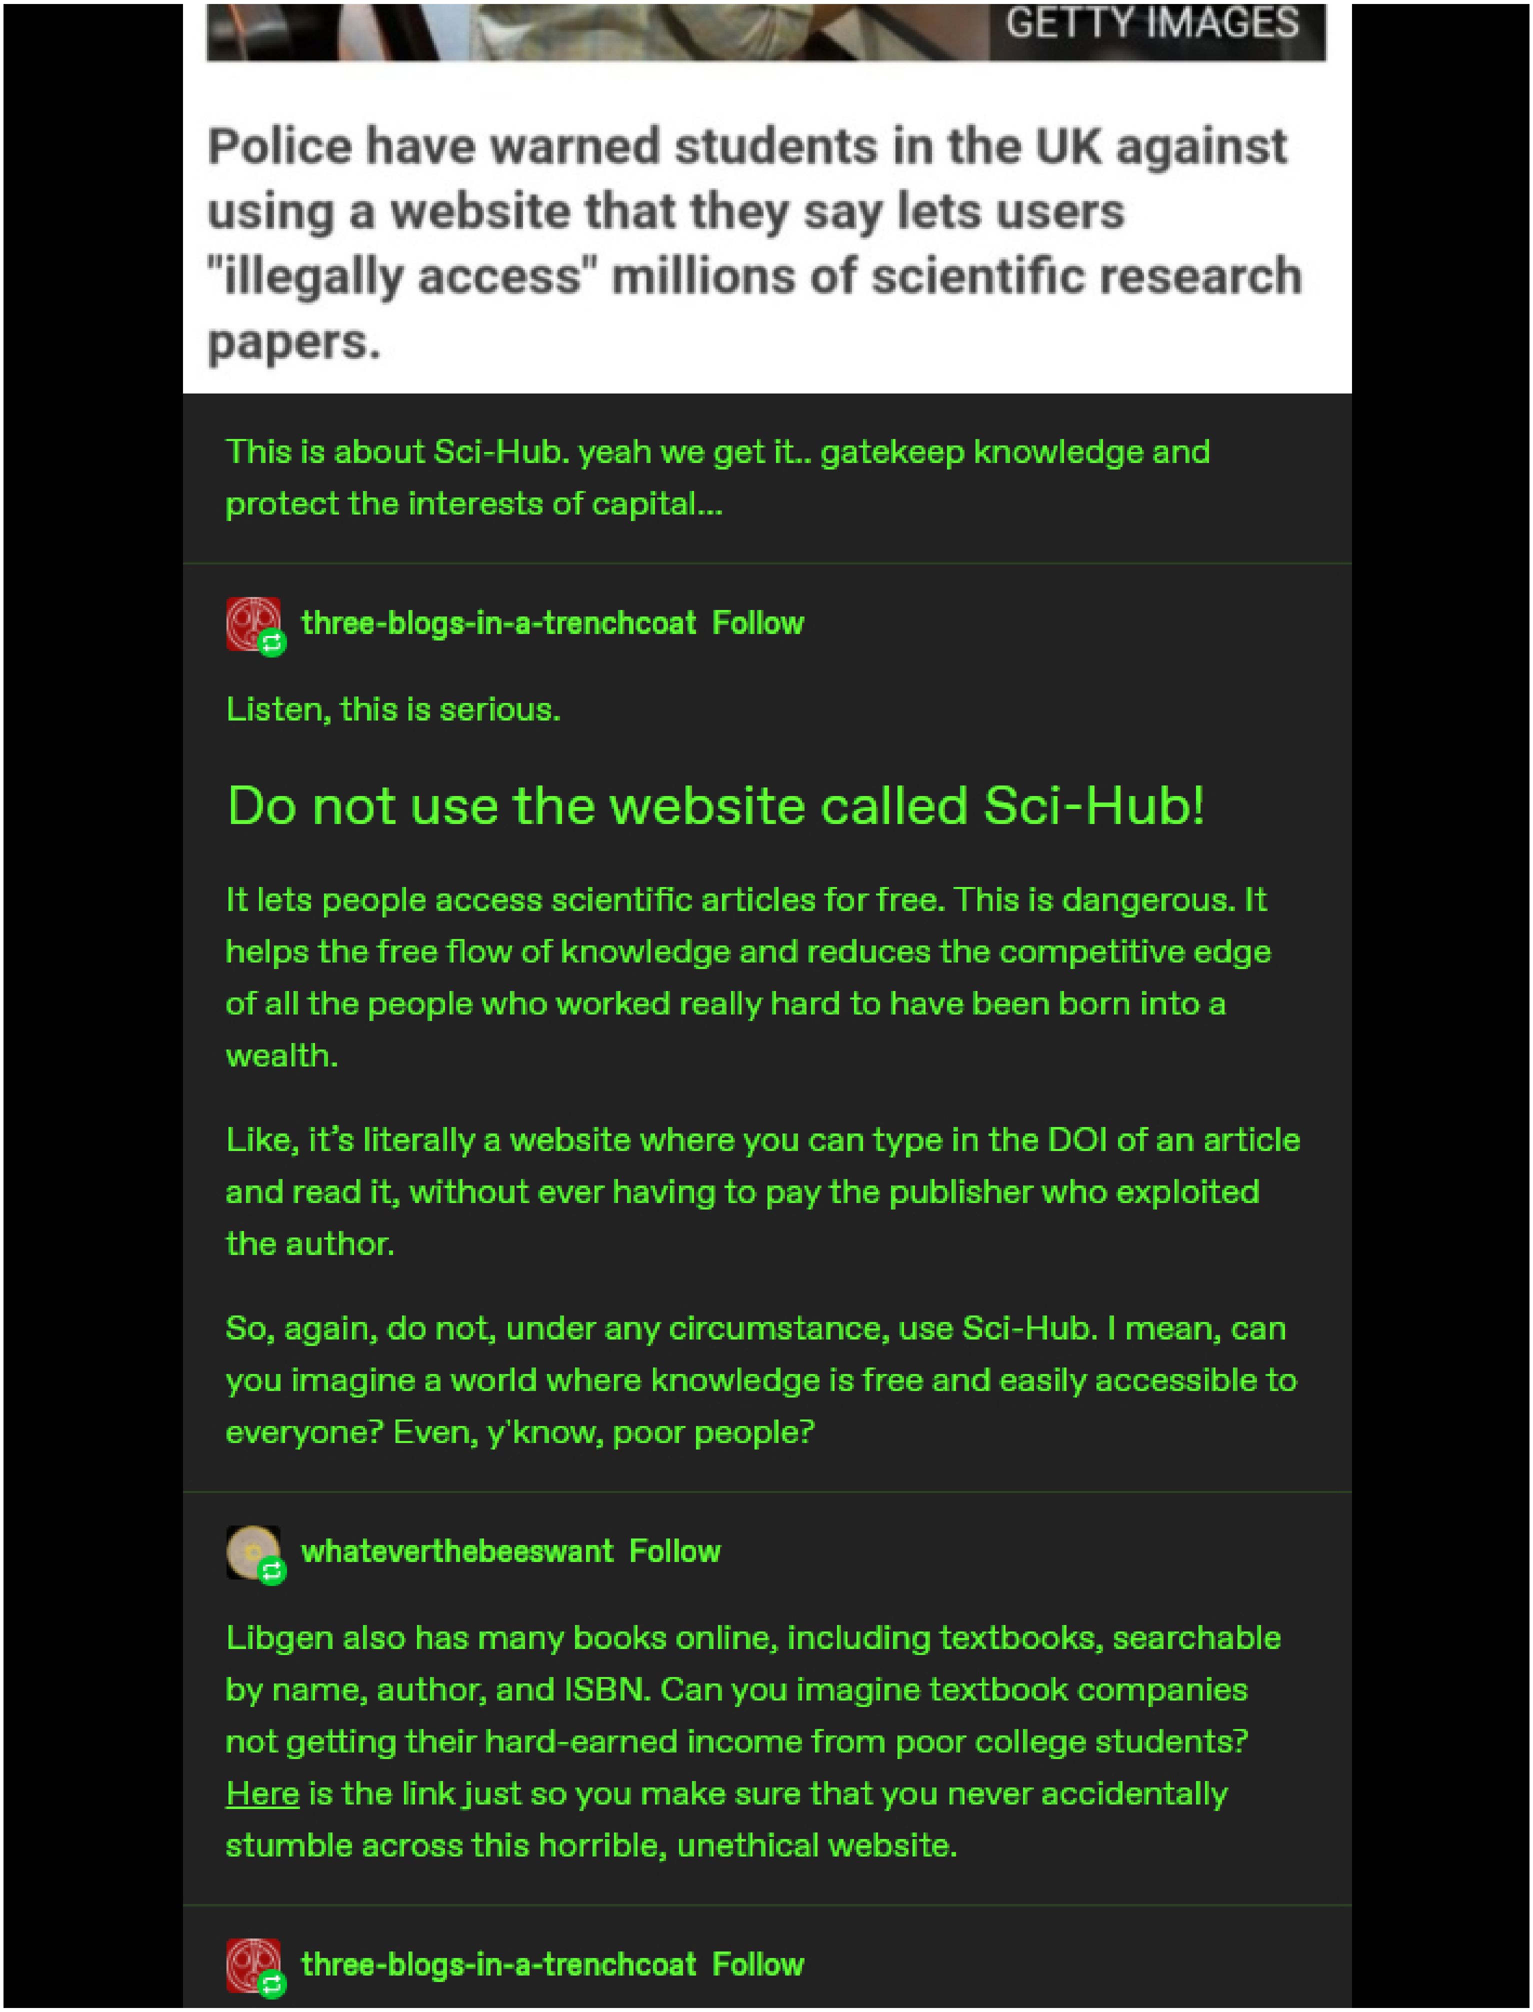
Police warn students to avoid science website

By Sean Coughlan
BBC News family and education correspondent

19 March 2021 | Family & Education



Police have warned students in the UK against using a website that they say lets users "illegally access" millions of scientific research papers.

This is about Sci-Hub. yeah we get it.. gatekeep knowledge and protect the interests of capital...

three-blogs-in-a-trenchcoat Follow

Listen, this is serious.

Do not use the website called Sci-Hub!

It lets people access scientific articles for free. This is dangerous. It helps the free flow of knowledge and reduces the competitive edge of all the people who worked really hard to have been born into a wealth.

Like, it's literally a website where you can type in the DOI of an article and read it, without ever having to pay the publisher who exploited the author.

So, again, do not, under any circumstance, use Sci-Hub. I mean, can you imagine a world where knowledge is free and easily accessible to everyone? Even, y'know, poor people?

whateverthebeeswant Follow

Libgen also has many books online, including textbooks, searchable by name, author, and ISBN. Can you imagine textbook companies not getting their hard-earned income from poor college students? Here is the link just so you make sure that you never accidentally stumble across this horrible, unethical website.

three-blogs-in-a-trenchcoat Follow

Oh, and while we're talking about books, if you've managed to stay clear from Libgen, definitely don't go to zlibrary, where you can also find a lot of textbooks, but unfortunately they're completely free.

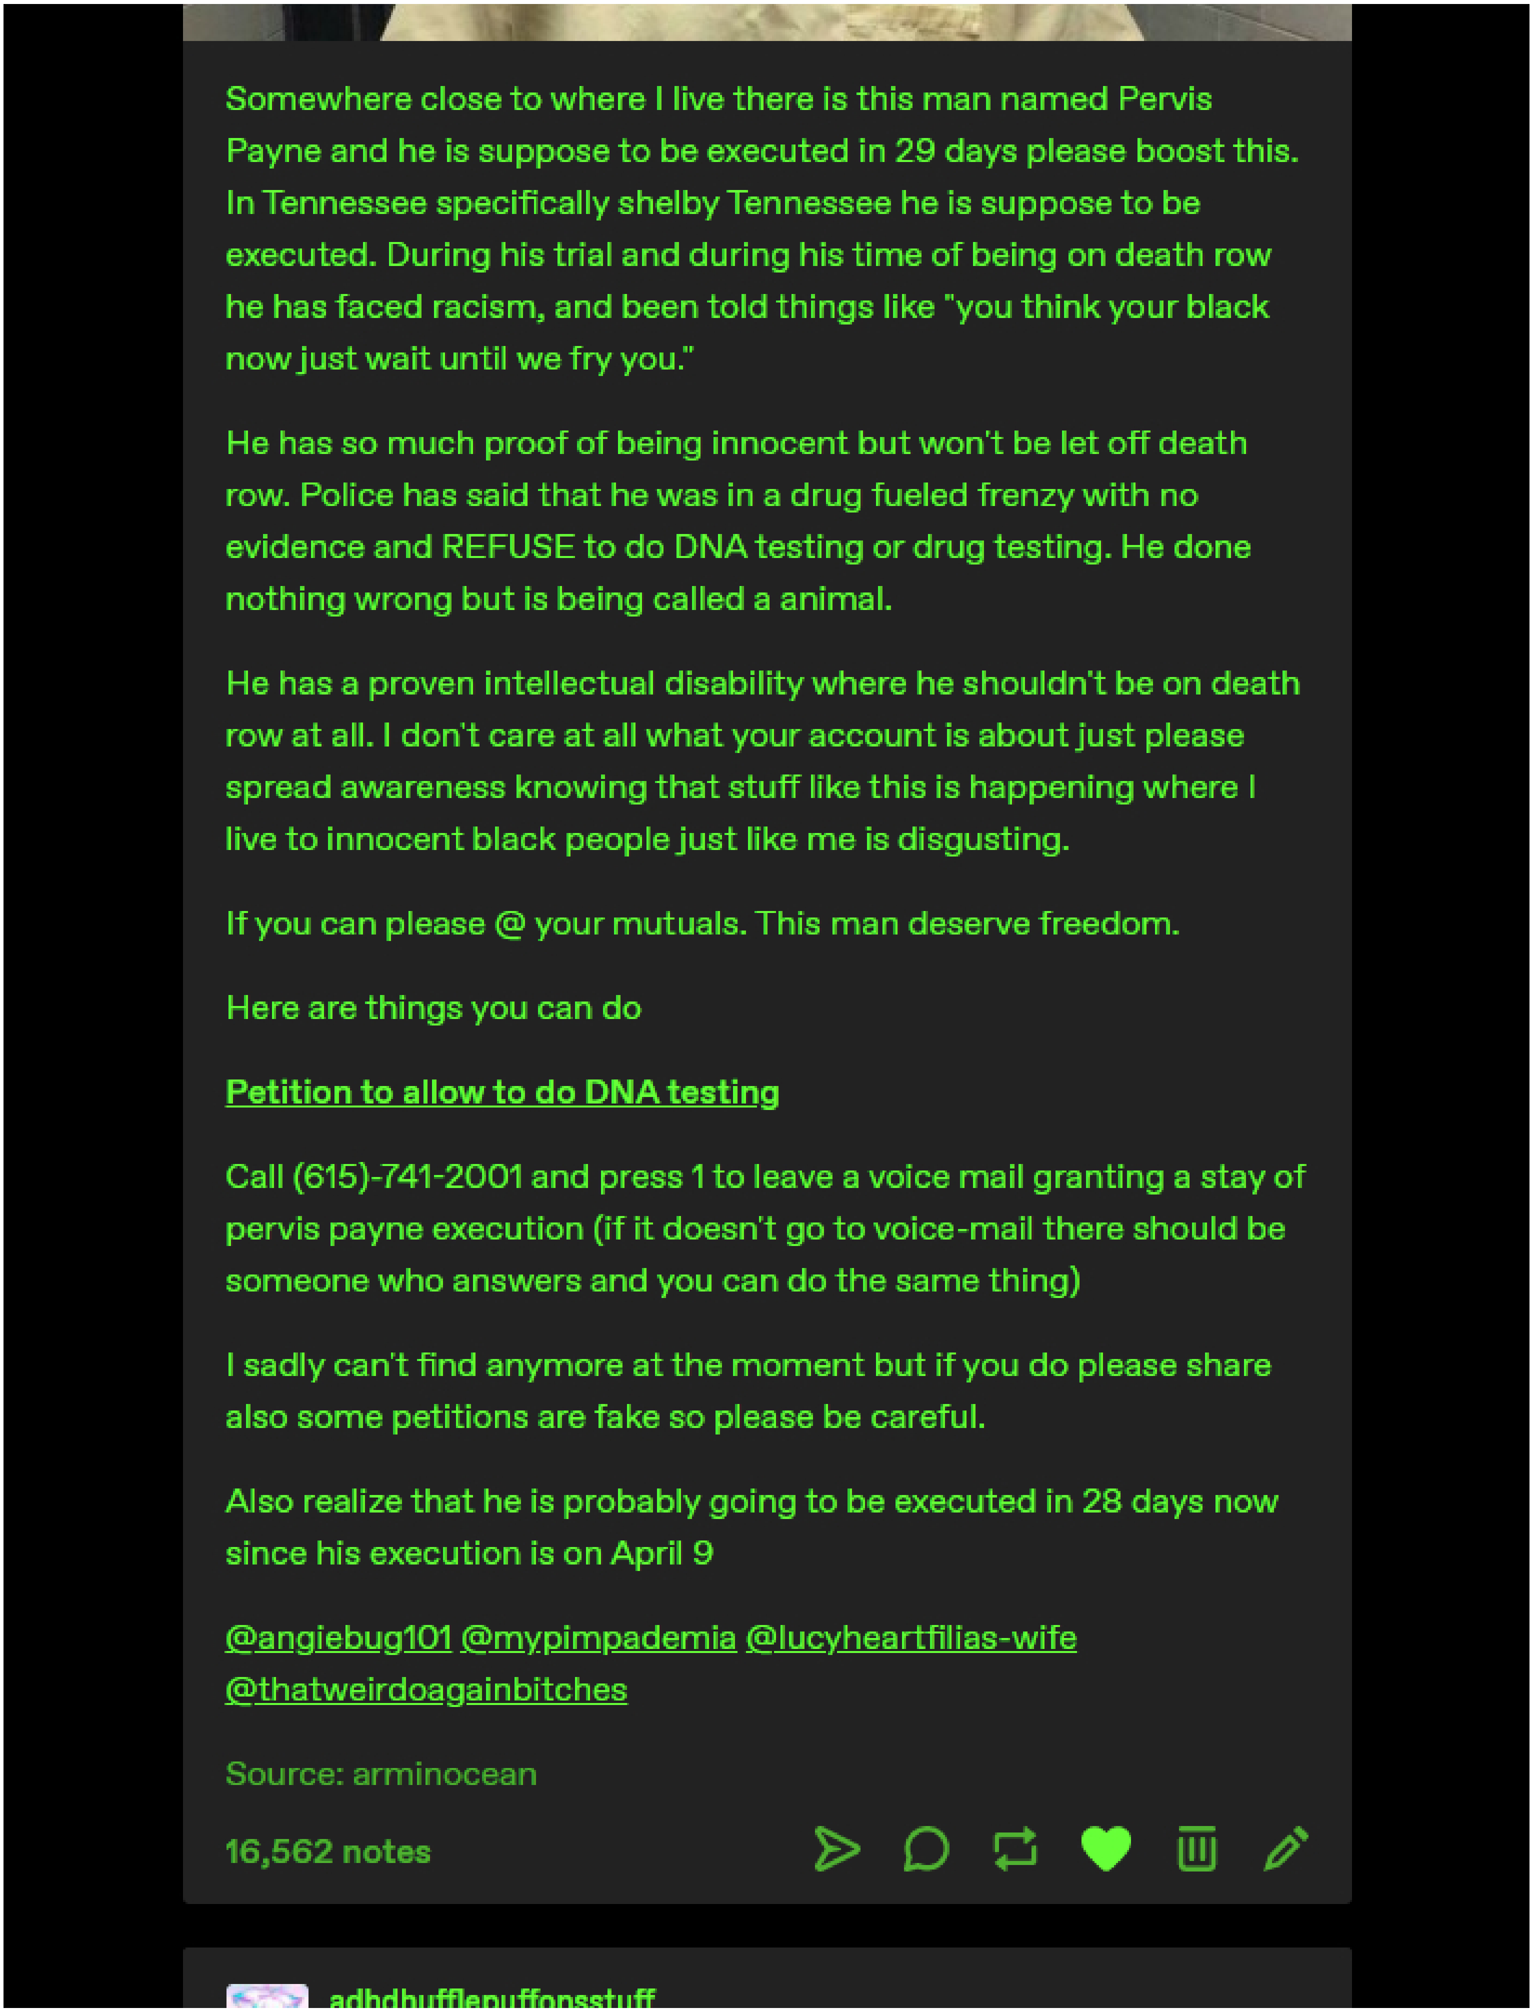
TW- death row



Somewhere close to where I live there is this man named Pervis Payne and he is suppose to be executed in 29 days please boost this. In Tennessee specifically shelby Tennessee he is suppose to be executed. During his trial and during his time of being on death row he has faced racism, and been told things like "you think your black now just wait until we fry you."

He has so much proof of being innocent but won't be let off death row. Police has said that he was in a drug fueled frenzy with no evidence and REFUSE to do DNA testing or drug testing. He done nothing wrong but is being called a animal.

He has a proven intellectual disability where he shouldn't be on death row at all. I don't care at all what your account is about just please spread awareness knowing that stuff like this is happening where I live to innocent black people just like me is disgusting.

If you can please @ your mutuals. This man deserve freedom.

Here are things you can do

Petition to allow to do DNA testing

Call (615)-741-2001 and press 1 to leave a voice mail granting a stay of pervis payne execution (if it doesn't go to voice-mail there should be someone who answers and you can do the same thing)

I sadly can't find anymore at the moment but if you do please share also some petitions are fake so please be careful.

Also realize that he is probably going to be executed in 28 days now since his execution is on April 9

the more i think about mcu spider-man the more i don't like mcu spider-man

deltasylvania

like mcu twink peter will never have the depth of our friendly neighborhood spider-man. literally any time they try and make spider-man super cool with access to a ton of sick tech and everything i start to really lose interest. the appeal of spider-man to me is that he's like just some guy who happens to have super powers. like you could just hang out with this dude. the "bigger" they make him the more he loses that.

actually i'm gonna elaborate on this further because spider-verse did this but they did it well and with purpose.

the peter from miles' dimension was super over the top, kinda larger than life. as pointed out by peter b. several times. however unlike other times they've done this it wasn't just to try and make spider-man look cool, it was all a part of miles' narrative. miles was given huge shoes to fill and they used this as a tool to portray how small miles felt compared to peter.

but the difference between miles and mcu peter is that miles didn't need any of that to become the spider-man he is today. one of his main role models in the film is peter b. who's broke and off his game, but still manages to do amazing things.

that's the appeal of spider-man. is that anyone can make a difference, no matter where you're at in your life you can still be incredible.

> “I REMEMBER an incident when I […] had signed up for an evening class taught by Abraham Joshua Heschel… One evening, Professor Heschel entered the classroom and said to us, “Something miraculous just happened as I was walking up Broadway on my way to class.” That got our attention. We listened to hear what that miraculous event might have been. He went on, “Something miraculous happened. The sun set, and of all the people on Broadway, nobody noticed…” Heschel was teaching us that a miracle need not be something extraordinary and inexplicable… The predictable regularity of the world, the fact that sunrise and sunset, the phases of the moon, the change of seasons happen with such precision that they can be anticipated down to the precise minute and never deviate, that is a miracle.”

Apparently there is a Lady Loki but probably she is one the casts. I just hope they don't go with the Loki possess Sif's body plot line.

Anyway, Katie McGrath is a good choice and she's got the looks. But I've always been partial to Eva Green for Lady Loki. I remember after I had watched Thor movies and knew about Lady Loki in comics, when I watched Dark Shadows(directed by Tim Burton) again, I was like wow she would make a great Lady Loki!

She has the looks too and just look at those cheekbones which are similar to Loki's.

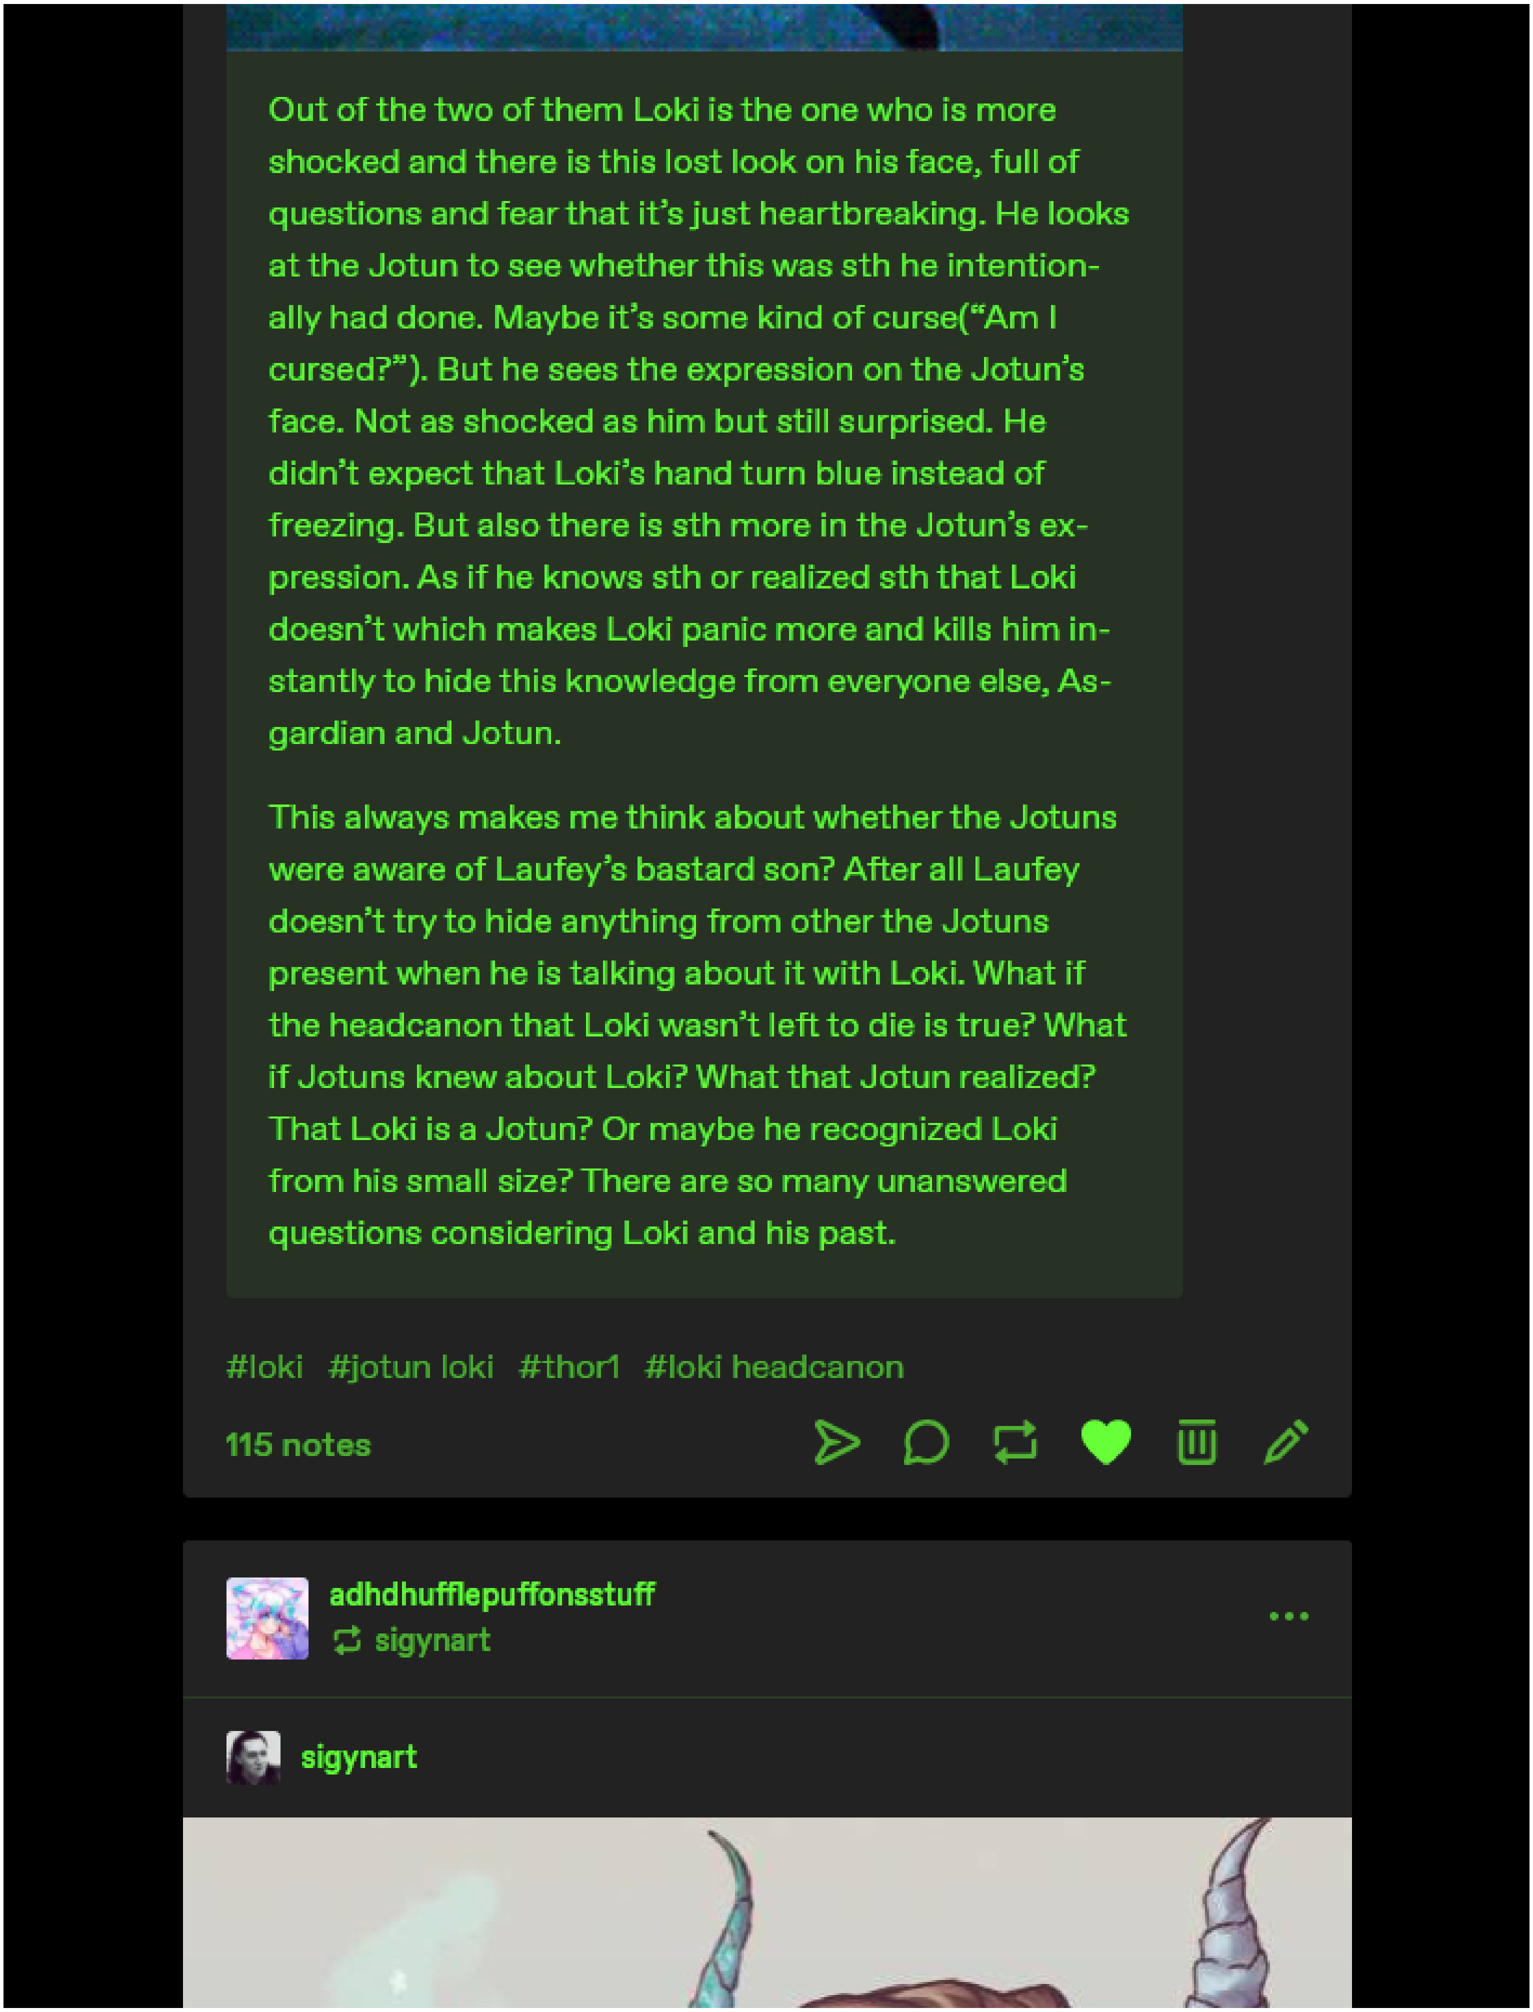
Okay, lets talk about the face of the frost giant who grabbed loki's arm, that specific part of the scene actually, like there was a whole battle and the guy just grabs his arm, his armor falling then his skin blue and both are like 👀, even the soldier seemed to be "So... Whata heck?"

lucianalight answered:



Out of the two of them Loki is the one who is more shocked and there is this lost look on his face, full of questions and fear that it's just heartbreaking. He looks at the Jotun to see whether this was sth he intentionally had done. Maybe it's some kind of curse("Am I cursed?"). But he sees the expression on the Jotun's face. Not as shocked as him but still surprised. He didn't expect that Loki's hand turn blue instead of freezing. But also there is sth more in the Jotun's expression. As if he knows sth or realized sth that Loki doesn't which makes Loki panic more and kills him instantly to hide this knowledge from everyone else, Asgardian and Jotun.

This always makes me think about whether the Jotuns were aware of Laufey's bastard son? After all Laufey doesn't try to hide anything from other the Jotuns present when he is talking about it with Loki. What if the headcanon that Loki wasn't left to die is true? What if Jotuns knew about Loki? What that Jotun realized? That Loki is a Jotun? Or maybe he recognized Loki from his small size? There are so many unanswered questions considering Loki and his past.

mirkwoodest Follow

One of the ballsiest things Tolkien ever did was write 473k words about some hobbits called frodo, sam, merry, and pippin and then write in the appendices that their names are actually maura, ban, kali, and razal.

mirkwoodest Follow

This just in: Eowyn and Eomer's names actually start with the letter "L." [source for other nerds]

mirkwoodest Follow

#wait so they have hobbitish names and common names?

No, they have Westron names and English names.

What you've got to understand is that everything Tolkien wrote was him pretending to merely translate ancient documents. He was writing as if the Hobbit and The Lord of the Rings were actually been written by Bilbo, Frodo, and Sam (or Bilba, Maura, and Ban) and he was just some random contemporary academic translating it all into English for us.

There are many languages in his books, but generally speaking, everything written in English in the books is a translation of the language "Westron." Therefore any names that come from Westron, he translated. Names coming from other languages, like Sindarin, he left as they were. Why? IDK. Maybe because the stories are from a hobbit perspective and hobbits speak Westron, so he wanted the Westron parts to sound familiar and the other languages/names to remain foreign?

“But Mirkwoodest!” you cry, “The word ‘hobbit’ isn’t an English word! And the names Bilbo Baggins, Frodo Baggins, Samwise Gamgee, Peregrin Took, and Meriadoc Brandybuck” all sounds super weird and not like English at all!”

Psych! They are in English! (Or Old English, German, or Norse.) Once again you underestimate what a nerd Tolkien was. Let me break it down:

In Westron, hobbits are actually called “kuduk,” which means “hole-dweller,” so for an English translation, Tolkien called them “hobbits” which is a modernization of the Old English word “holbytla” which comes from “Hol” (hole) and “Bytla”(builder).

“Maura” is a Westron name which means “Wise.” Weirdly enough, “Frodo” is an actual Proto-Germanic name that actual people used to have and it means the same thing.

“Banazîr” is Westron for “half-wise, or simple.” In Proto Germanic, the prefix “Sam” means half, and wise is obviously a word we still use.

“Razanur” means “Traveler” or “Stranger” which is also the meaning of the word “Peregrin(e)” This one is a twofer because “Razar” means “a small red apple” and in English so does “Pippin.”

“Kalimac” apparently is a meaningless name in Westron, but the shortened form “Kali” means “happy,” so Jirt decided his nickname would be “Merry” and chose the really obscure ancient Celtic name “Meriodoc” to match.

Jirt chose to leave “Bilba” almost exactly the same in English, but he changed the ending to an “O” because in Westron names ending in “a” are masculine.

I’m not going to go on and talk about the last names but those all have special meanings too (except Tûk, which is too iconic to change more than the spelling of, apparently).

The Rohirrim were also Westron speakers first and foremost, so their names are also “translations” into Old English and Proto-Germanic names are also "translations" into Old English and Proto-Germanic words, i.e. "Eowyn" is a combination of "Eoh" (horse) and "Wynn" (joy/bliss).

"Rohirrim/Rohan" are Sindarin words, but in the books, they call themselves the "Éothéod" which is an Old English/Norse combo that means "horse people." Tolkien tells us in the "Peoples of Middle Earth" that the actual Westron for "Éothéod" is Lohtûr, which means that Eowyn and Eomer's names, which come from the same root word, must also start with the letter L.

The names of all the elves, dwarves, Dunedain, and men from Gondor are not English translations, since they come from root words other than Westron.

The takeaway from this is that when a guy whose first real job was researching the history and etymology of words of Germanic origin beginning with the letter "W" writes a book, you can expect this kind of tomfoolery.

Notes: Sorry I said "Razal" instead of "Razar" in my original post I'm a fraud.

As you all may know, I am an Asian American, and the rise in anti-Asian hate crimes in the US is tragic and terrifying. A few years ago, my mother and I had unprovoked, racist threats spat at us while we were simply grocery shopping. They didn't care who we were as people- they just reduced us to our race.

I want this space to be positive and encouraging for everyone, and that's not possible unless I make this space clearly anti-racist. I hope this comic is a hopeful reminder that we're all able to make the world a better place together! I can't stop anything alone, but together, we can make a more caring society that welcomes and protects people of all races.

Have I told y'all about my husband's Fork Theory?

If I did already, pretend I didn't, I'm an old.

So the Spoon Theory is a fundamental metaphor used often in the chronic pain/chronic illness communities to explain to non-spoonies why life is harder for them. It's super useful and we use that all the time.

But it has a corollary.

You know the phrase, “Stick a fork in me, I’m done,” right?

Well, Fork Theory is that one has a Fork Limit, that is, you can probably cope okay with one fork stuck in you, maybe two or three, but at some point you will lose your shit if one more fork happens.

A fork could range from being hungry or having to pee to getting a new bill or a new diagnosis of illness. There are lots of different sizes of forks, and volume vs. quantity means that the fork limit is not absolute. I might be able to deal with 20 tiny little escargot fork annoyances, such as a hangnail or slightly suboptimal pants, but not even one “you poked my trigger on purpose because you think it’s fun to see me melt down” pitchfork.

This is super relevant for neurodivergent folk. Like, you might be able to deal with your feet being cold or a tag, but not both. Hubby describes the situation as “It may seem weird that I just get up and leave the conversation to go to the bathroom, but you just dumped a new financial burden on me and I already had to pee, and going to the bathroom is the fork I can get rid of the fastest.”

cipheramnesia Follow

I like this and also I like the low key point that you may be able to cope with bigger forks by finding little ones you can remove quickly. A combination of time, focus, and reduction to small stressors that can allow you to focus on the larger stressor in a constructive way.

sheepscot Follow

does this mean somewhere there is a knife theory?

jenroses Follow

Knives are traumas that require help to fix. Take a fork out and stress is reduced. Take a knife out and you better be prepared to stop the bleeding.

specialagentace Follow

There is practically nothing about this series I don't love.

It was written by a man who had the imagination to dream up a world where poverty had been eliminated - where equality was simply a Thing - where an entire world of humanity had found a common thread and had moved from fighting each-other because there was nothing left to fight for (For good reasons rather than dystopian bad ones) and have turned their endless drive toward exploring the universe around them.

It was unapologetic about it's blatant sociopolitical commentary - it did not shy away from the hard stuff and it didn't pull punches.

The cast was intentionally diverse. It put women and people of color and political enemies (russians) all together, working together in harmony, toward a common goal without falling back on stereotypes or dehumanizing any of them.

And it was backed and produced by an independently wealthy woman who refused to let this little show fall to the sidelines because big production companies didn't want it. A little known fact: Lucille Ball, who owned Desilu Productions (Who bought out Desi Arnez's portion when they divorced), gave Star Trek the green light. Later, she would save the show from certain cancellation by over-riding her own board and keeping the show.

The producers consulted NASA and other scientific pioneers when creating their world - and in turn, the scientific pioneers looked at what Star Trek had come up with and strove toward recreating it.

Science drove Star Trek and Star Trek drove Science.

I f*cking love this show.

Hey students, here's a pro tip: do not write an email to your prof while you're seriously sick.

Signed, a person who somehow came up with "dear hello, I am sick and not sure if I'll be alive to come tomorrow and I'm sorry, best slutantions, [name]".

yay855 Follow

I mean, if someone wrote that to me, I'd probably believe they were sick.

As someone who has taught college, please send those emails because 1) We WILL believe that; no one would write that on purpose and 2) we need a laugh sometimes.

asortoflight Follow

On the other side of this, once after getting taken to the ER by ambulance, I got an email from the professor whose class I’d passed out in, and the message had no text, just the subject line “you good?”

SENATOR PATRICK'S OFFICE.
NOT WHAT WE PROMISED THE AMERICAN PEOPLE!
...WELL, I WANT TO KNOW WHO KNEW WHAT AND WHEN! AND IN THE MEANTIME, SHUT THOSE "SCHOOLS" DOWN!
SENATOR PATRICK? I'M SORRY TO BOTHER YOU, SIR, BUT, UM--
--THERE ARE SOME... CONSTITUENTS... GATHERED OUTSIDE.
YOU SAID KAMALA'S LAW WAS SUPPOSED TO KEEP YOUNG PEOPLE SAFE! BEING LOCKED UP ISN'T SAFETY!
THE CHAMPIONS HAVE BEEN HERE FOR US WHEN WE NEEDED THEM. IT'S TIME TO BE HERE FOR THEM!
REPEAL THE LAW! REPEAL THE LAW!
REPEAL THE LAW! REPEAL THE LAW!
FIND OUT WHO SOME OF THE LEADERS ARE. I'D LIKE TO MEET WITH THEM. IN FACT, SEE IF YOU CAN GET MS. MARVEL IN HERE-- OOF!
YOU'LL DO NO SUCH THING, SENATOR.
NOT WITHOUT ROXXON'S PERMISSION.
HOW DARE YOU? I JUST SAW THAT FOOTAGE. THE WHOLE WORLD HAS SEEN IT. I JUST... I JUST WANTED TO KEEP KIDS
SO DID

YOU. PERHAPS WE JUST HAVE DIFFERENT VISIONS OF SAFETY, PATRICK.
YOU VIOLATED--
DO YOU THINK SECURITY COSTS NOTHING?
ROXXON IS A BUSINESS, PATRICK. AND SOME OF THESE KIDS ARE VERY BAD FOR BUSINESS.
THEY'RE TROUBLEMAKERS. THEY THREATEN LAW AND ORDER, THE VERY THING YOU ARE SWORN TO DEFEND.
THEY'RE TELLING THE TRUTH, SENATOR. HALF OF IT, ANYWAY.

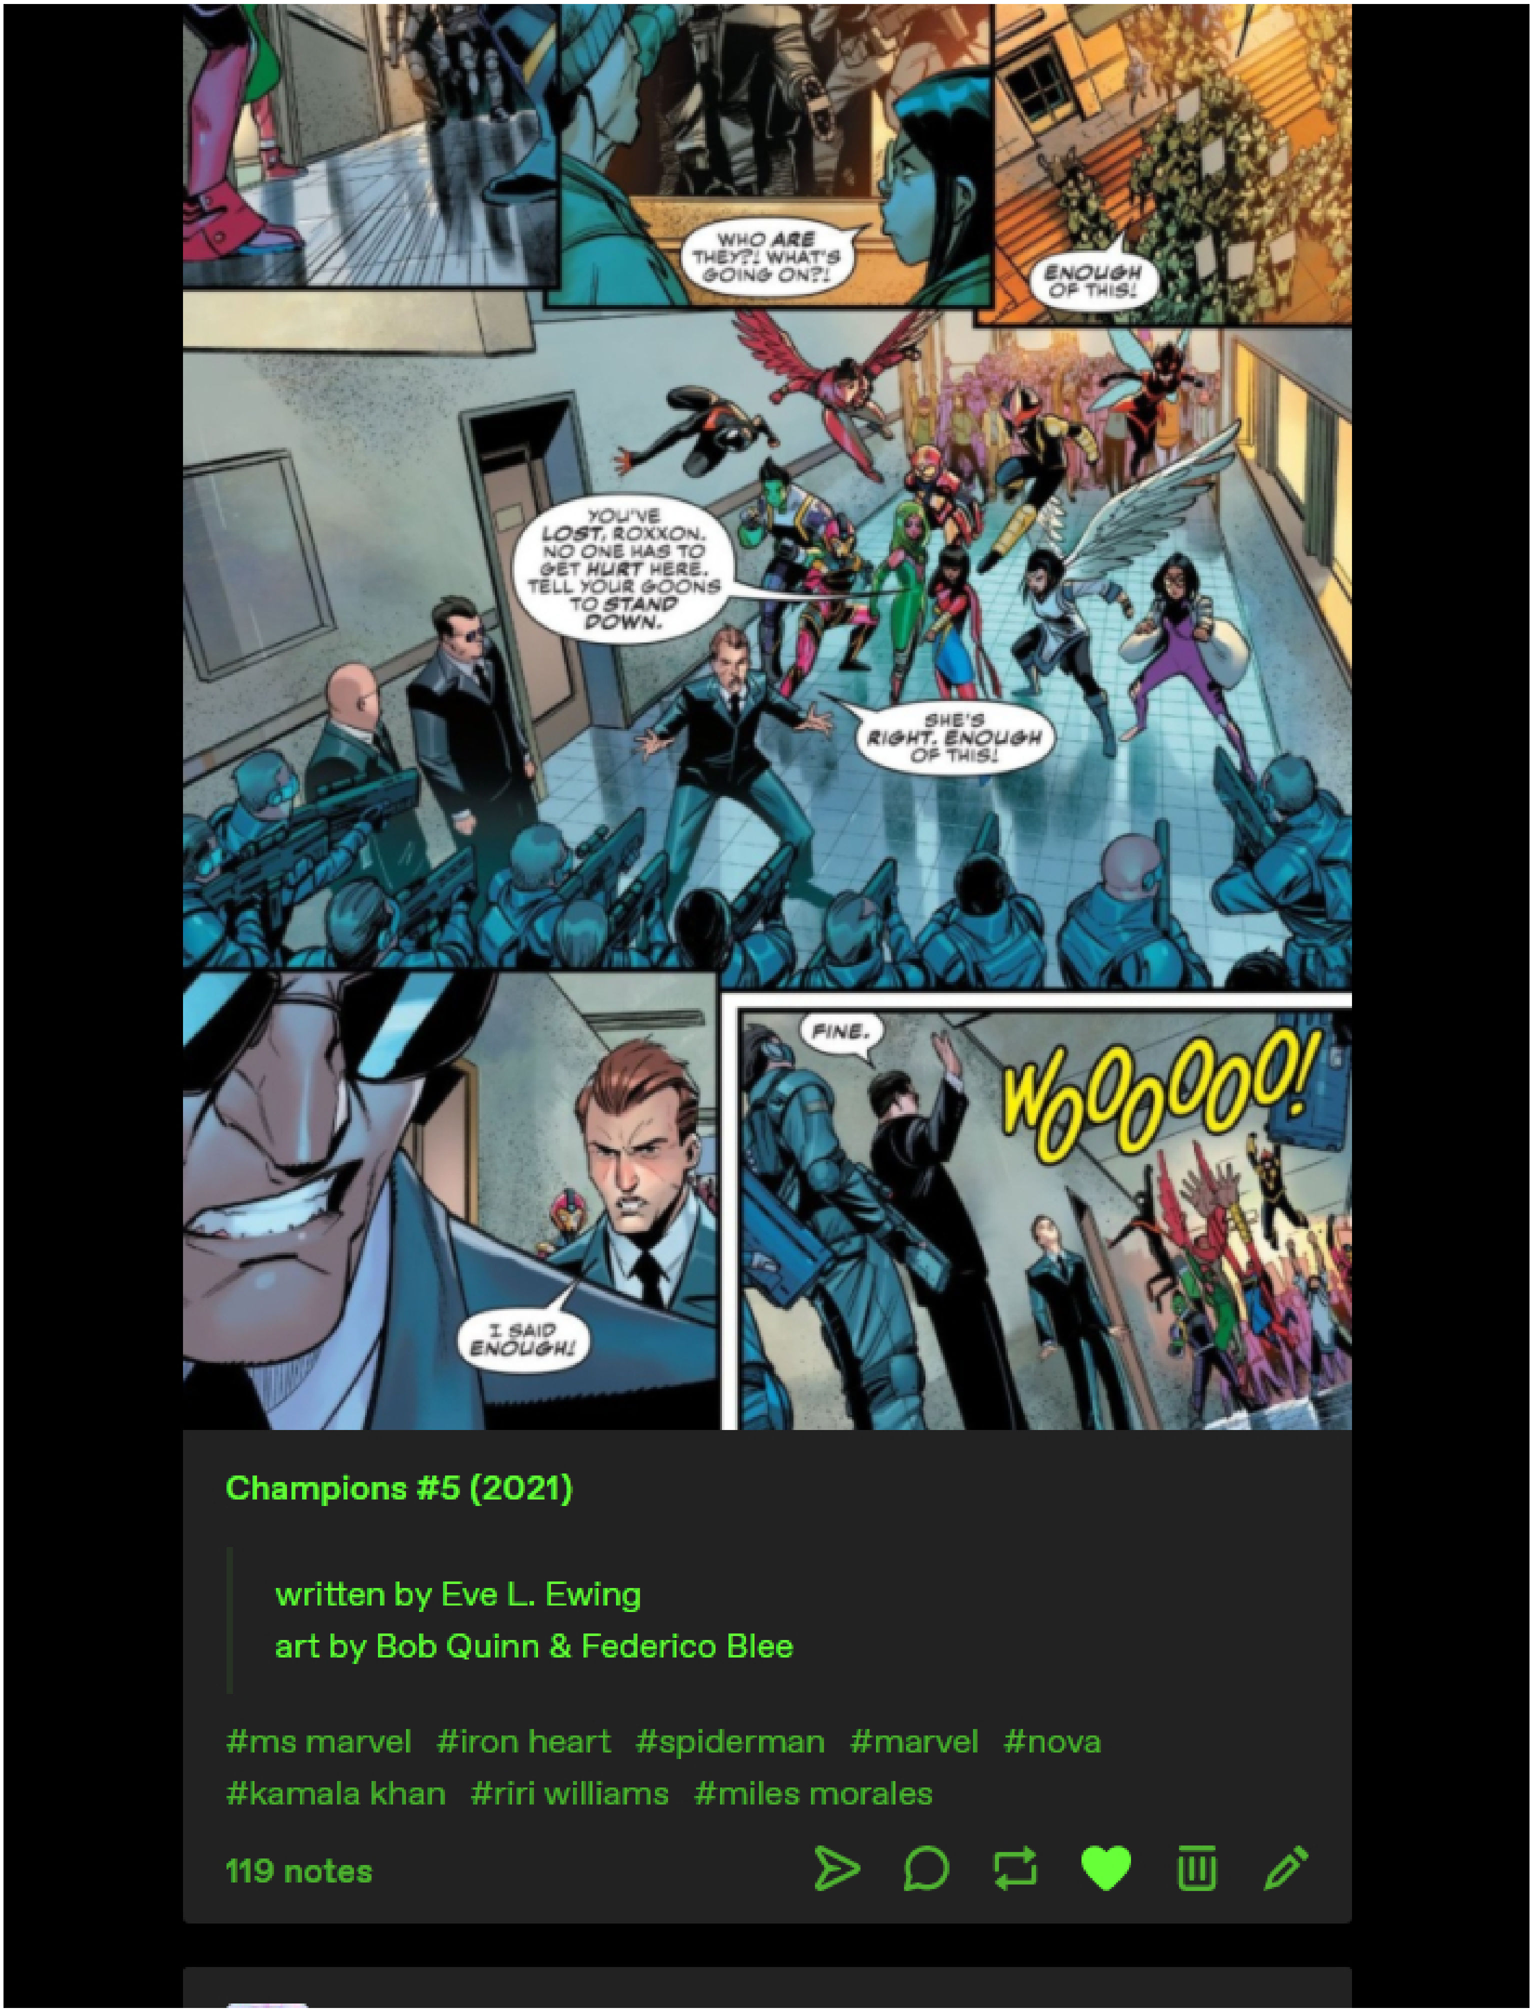
WE ARE BAD FOR BUSINESS. WHEN YOUR BUSINESS IS SUCKING THE LIFE OUT OF THE PLANET AND ITS PEOPLE. SO THEY TRIED TO SEND US UNDERGROUND. OUT OF SIGHT, OUT OF MIND, OUT OF YOUR HAIR.
AILANA KABUA WAS BAD FOR BUSINESS TOO. SO YOU TRIED TO KILL HER. TO DEMORALIZE A GENERATION OF "TROUBLEMAKERS."
YOU HAVE NO PROOF.
I DON'T HEAR YOU DENYING IT.
ROXXON IS IN TROUBLE, SENATOR. THEY SAW THIS AS A MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL ARRANGEMENT. GIVE YOU THE PUBLIC SAFETY VOTES YOU SO BADLY WANTED...
...AND TAKE OUT SOME KIDS WHO WERE A THORN IN THEIR SIDE.
WE HAVE A BREACH.
SEE? LIKE CLOCKWORK. THEY'RE COMING FOR US. AND HONESTLY, SENATOR, THEY MIGHT BE COMING FOR YOU TOO.
YEAH. YOUR ASSISTANT HERE ISN'T LOOKING SO GOOD.
HELLO AGAIN.
THOSE GUYS WERE AT THE COLES DISASTER TOO!
LET'S GO HELP THE CHAMPIONS!



WHO ARE THEY?! WHAT'S GOING ON?!
ENOUGH OF THIS!
YOU'VE LOST, ROXXON. NO ONE HAS TO GET HURT HERE. TELL YOUR GOONS TO STAND DOWN.
SHE'S RIGHT. ENOUGH OF THIS!
I SAID ENOUGH!
FINE.
WOOOOOO!

something that I feel like is missing from fandom nowadays is the idea that you dont have to have a unified, chronologically/tonally consistent interpretation of your favorite work. your fics dont have to fit within the same version of canon, even if theyre all canon-compliant on their own. your headcanons can contradict each other. be a multishipper. write metas that take two totally different interpretations of the same plot point. write a character as a villain and then write them as the hero next time. write a character as a lesbian and then write them as straight next time! engage in hypotheticals and drop them when you get bored! make up the rules as you go!! have fun with it!!!
